WOODBURN BANK ROBBED

$3000 Taken--Grab Money in Broad Daylight and Escape.

WOODBURN, Oregon, May 8.—Two masked robbers held up Assistant Cashier Tracy Poorman this afternoon, seized nearly $3000 from the counter, ran two miles across the open field, and safely gained a hiding place in the dense timber along the banks of Pudding river. Twenty men chased the robbers across the fields, but at too great a distance to shoot them with the revolvers at hand, half a hundred militiamen and citizens scoured the country later in the afternoon, but the men have not been found, and the chances seem more than even for them to complete their escape.

The daring robbery occurred shortly before 2 o'clock this afternoon. J. M. Poorman, cashier of the bank, was in Portland. There were in the bank at the time Tracy Poorman, assistant cashier; Miss Gertude Eddy, a daughter of J. B. Eddy of Tillamook, the bookkeeper, and Don Coles, a telephone boy for the Hurley-Moore Drug store.

Coles had just entered with a check, which was for a small sum, and Poorman held up a bundle of crisp new bills, asking, "How would you like to have these?" At that instant two men entered with revolvers pointing at Poorman's head, and commanded, "Hands up!" Poorman started to laugh at what he considered a joke, but when he saw that one man wore a handkerchief over the lower part of his face and the other man wore goggles, he threw up his hands, as did the others in the bank.

One robber controlled the situation with two leveled Colt's revolvers while the other went behind the counter, and scraped all the loose money into his pockets and a small sack. No attempt was made to get at the vault, which was locked. The man with the money then went out the front door, and when he was half way across the street his companion tacked out, and the two men ran southeast across Front street.

FIGHT THE EXCLUSION LAW

Chinese Minister Gathering Data for a Case Against the U. S.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Sir Cheng Tung Liang Cheng, the Chinese Minister, has issued a confidential circular or proclamation to all Chinese in the United States requesting that he be furnished with reports of all cases of applicants who have been denied admission to this country and of all deportations on the ground of nonregistration which have been decided since the expiration of the exclusion treaty of 1894. The circular asks also for an estimate of the damages to the applicants from such refusal on the part of the United States and from such deportations, holding the acts the officials of this country, under the law and in view of the rejection of the proposed consent of the Chinese government to a reasonable exclusion of Chinese to be hostile to a friendly nation.

The circular, which is written in the Chinese language, was issued through the Consul-General of China at San Francisco. Its object, as understood by the United States, is to facilitate the collection of evidence as the basis of a suit against the United States to test the validity of the existing exclusion laws. In what particular the attack upon the laws is to be made is not known to the Government officials. They hold that the power of Congress to enact laws to exclude Chinese or anybody else cannot be assailed successfully.

It is held by some lawyers of repute, however, that there are phases of the Chinese exclusion law which will not stand a test in the courts, and it is understood to be the intention of one or more of the influential Chinese organizations in this country to institute legal proceedings by which the rights of individual Chinese will be adjudicated.

A Good Business for a Boy.

The people who want to "give the boys a chance" ought to recommend them a strawberry patch. The writer could give the name of a 15 year-old boy who last season cleared $400 from an acre of strawberries. Aside from the plowing of the ground and the picking of the berries, he did all the work himself. The cultivation was done by means of a gentle horse loaned him by a neighbor, and he paid for the use of the horse by helping the owner through his haytag. This boy spent many weary hours the season before in hoeing about the crowns of the plants which could not be reached by the cultivator, but he worked faithfully at the task, and when the growing season was over the patch was as free from weeds as it was possible to make it. The past season was not a very favorable one for strawberries, but as above stated this stirring young fellow had $400 to show for his industry. The land on which the crop was grown is a village acre lot for which he paid a rental of $5 a year.

We cannot think of anything at which a boy of that age could make as much money as this in the same length of time. And when we take into account the small expense attending the planting and care of such a crop, and the little risk which one takes of suffering a loss in the undertaking, it strikes us as something which nicely fits in with the ambitions of a bright, energetic boy to make some money in a way which will inspire him with confidence in his own abilities and raise him in the estimation of his elders.

In every town and village there is a ready market for strawberries, and buyers will give preference to those which are home grown over the stock which has come consigned to the local dealers from more or less distant points. There is not one village market in a hundred where the home-grown supply of berries is equal to the demand. The way is open to some smart boy in all of these places to make a snug sum of money by filling this gap in the market, and the boy who avails himself of the chance will thereby acquire business experience which will set him well forward in the race when the time comes for him to give himself to larger undertakings. For the common, ordinary boy, who is not looking forward to the presidency, but wants to make use of all means open to him for placing himself on a firm business footing and rising to an assured position in the business world, there is something worthy of his attention in this suggestion of a strawberry patch as a started. And there are a lot of boys, not otherwise employed, who would eagerly grasp the opportunity if some older person from whom they are accustomed to receive counsel would point it out to them.—Farmers' Tribune.

The Editor on Kissing.

From the Pocahontas (Ark.) Star
The greatest surprise to a girl who gets kissed the first time is that there is no taste to it.—Pocahontas Times.

No taste to it? Well, by the hen feathers on Cupid's dart, but the Times man must be color blind in the palate. They tell us, those who have tried it, that it tastes like the double distilled essence of honey spread thick on a piece of pumpkin pie. Away back in the dim and joyful years ago, before we lost all our teeth and our cinch on the beauty prize, the prettiest girl in all the world told us with her own eyes that it felt like a covey of quails flying out of each ear and ended up with a sensation like a flock of angels pouring molasses down one's back. No taste to the first kiss? Great Scott! It would make a wooden cigar Indian's hair curl and his toenails quiver in ecstasy. The Times man must be an icehouse.

Townsite of Redmond.

Engineers have staked out the streets and lots of the townsite of Redmond and the two principal streets are being cleared. Work of platting what is to be the main townsite, comprising about 20 acres, is now going forward and after the plat is filed a date will be set for the opening sales of lots. Three hundred and twenty acres have been set aside for townsite purposes. B. S. Cook & Co. have the property in hand. The new townsite is located about four miles east of Clifton Falls in section 16, township 15 south, range 13 east.—Bend Bulletin.

With the June number will begin The Pacific Monthly's series of special editions for the year 1905. They will comprise a number for Portland, for Seattle, for Southern California, for San Francisco and the souvenir number of the Lewis and Clark Exposition, also a special automobile number. The articles of Dr. Wolf Von Schierbrand, six in number, on "The Coming Supremacy of the Pacific" are also promised, and the plans contemplated by the publishers will, without question, place The Pacific Monthly far in advance, not only of present competitors, but also into the unreachably class of periodical literature on the Pacific Coast. The Pacific Monthly is sold to regular subscribers at the extremely low price of $1 a year. We have made an arrangement with the publishers by which we are able to offer it in connection with The Madras Pioneer (both publications) for $2.50 a year.

RIOTING ON THE DECREASE

Express and Delivery Wagons Guarded by Deputy Sheriffs.

CHICAGO, May 5.—The crisis in the teamsters' strike is expected to come tomorrow. The State-street merchants have decided to send out all wagons to make deliveries in all parts of the city. As far as possible these wagons will be guarded by Deputy Sheriffs and in some cases by the local police. It is the intention to place two men on each wagon, so far as the number of deputies already sworn in will permit.

Sheriff Barrett had 200 deputies in service tonight and said that he thought this number would be ample for the work outlined tomorrow. If it is not, it is said he will conclude that the Sheriff's office and the local police are not able to control the situation and a request will be made for the State Militia. Governor Deneen has said that he will order out the troops if the request is made by Sheriff Barrett, and upon the failure or success of the attempt at retail deliveries to be made tomorrow depends the coming of the troops.

Fifteen wagons were sent out today by the large dry goods and department stores, and all of them made deliveries without interruption. On each of these wagons rode two Deputy Sheriffs. It was the success of this attempt at delivering goods that prompted the stores to decide to send out tomorrow practically their full force of wagons.

Either because of threatened appearance of the troops or because of the addition to the police force in the shape of Deputy Sheriffs, there was much less rioting and fighting in the downtown streets today than on any day this week. The wagons of the express companies have all carried a guard armed with rifle or double-barreled shotgun and went between the depots and express offices without serious interruption.

The Right of Privacy.

Oregonian.
The supreme court of Georgia recently decided a case involving what is called the right of privacy. The following paragraphs from the syllabus define the right and show its limitations:

"Personal liberty includes not only freedom from physical restraint but also the right 'to be let alone,' to determine one's mode of life, whether it shall be a life of publicity or privacy, and to order one's life and manage one's affairs in a manner that may be most agreeable to him, so long as he does not violate the rights of others or of the public.

"Liberty of speech and of the press, when exercised within the bounds of constitutional guarantees, are limitations upon the exercise of the right of privacy.

"One who seeks public office, or any person who claims from the public approval or patronage, waives his right of privacy to such an extent that he cannot restrain or impede the public in any proper investigation into the conduct of his private life which may throw light upon the question as to whether the public should bestow upon him the office which he seeks or accord to him the approval or patronage which he asks. The holder of public office makes a waiver of a similar nature, and subjects his life at all times to closest scrutiny, in order that it may be determined whether the rights of the public are safe in his hands."

It appears from this decision that the seeker of office or public honors must submit not only his public but his private life and record to publicity in so far as the published reports are necessary to show whether he is fit for public honors or office. Even the right of privacy in a private person is not absolute, although the press must not abuse its liberty by offensive or injurious publications. There is danger in either extreme.

She Wanted a Space.

The Pioneer had a new typesetter recently. She was laboriously picking the letters out of the boxes, and coming to the end of a word, said:

"I want one of your slats."

The foreman very near fell off the stool, in astonishment, as he thought at first she wanted one of his ribs, but came to find out, she wanted a space.
