Squire Latham and His Burglar. This is one of the many stories told of old Squire Latham, a Plymouth County attorney of some years back. It fully illustrates his coolness and sense of method.

He was awakened one night by his wife, who told him she thought there were burglars in the house. The squire put on his dressing gown and went downstairs. In the back hall he found a rough looking man trying to open a door that led into the back yard. The burglar had unlocked the door and was pulling it with all his might. The squire, seeing the robber's predicament, called to him: "It don't open that way, you idiot! It slides back!"—Boston Herald.

Seldom Fatal.

"Say, doctor," remarked the man who had just dropped into the office, "I'm very much alarmed about my son."
"What's the trouble?" queried the M. D.

"He has had three peculiar attacks within a week," continued the parent, "and during each of them he was without sense or knowledge for nearly two hours."

"Oh, don't be uneasy about a little thing like that," replied the pill dispenser. "I've known people to live all their lives in a similar condition."

PORTLAND AMUSEMENTS.

Excellent Attractions at the Theaters—A Busy Season.

The visitor to Portland now has a wide range of choice in the matter of amusements.

The 1905 Fair is, of course, the big attraction, with its immense regular exposition, and its seductive Trail. "Venice" is acknowledged to be the greatest success and best show on the Trail. The predominant word now passed around about the Fair is the congratulatory remark that the splendid exposition is an assured financial success.

The Marquam Grand Theater opened a brilliant season with Wilton Lackaye in "The Pit," and all the town turned out. Beginning Wednesday, Sept. 13, probably the most widely popular play of the year, "Mrs. Wiggs, of the Cabbage Patch," will open at the Marquam and remain through the rest of the week, playing special matinees Thursday and Saturday. "The Chapurons," (scintillating musical comedy) plays at this theater all week beginning Sept. 18, and the old favorite May Irwin occupies the Marquam stage Sept. 25 to 28. The fall season starts off with a boom—lots of interest and good productions.

The Belasco Stock Company continues drawing heavily and keeps up its high standard of productions. "Harriet's Honeymoon" running this week; "Judah" opens Monday, Sept. 11, and "Captain Jinks" takes up the week Sept. 18 to 24. The Belasco is one of the handsomest theaters on the Pacific coast, and no visitor should miss seeing it.

The Baker Theater is having a joyous run of musical burlesque. Manager Baker wears his broadest smile of approval as he sees the large audiences. "The Brigadiers" is on this week, and the "Kentucky Belles" opens for the week of Sept. 10-16. Pretty girls, lots of fun, attractive spectacle.

The Empire is giving quite the most startling melodrama that Portland has ever experienced. The critics agree that the thrills in the plays, put on with a change of bill each week at this theater, are veritably unique of their kind. Every other instant a pistol shot, and the intervening seconds filled with thrills at your heart strings.

The Grand and the Star continue vaudeville entertainments with new people weekly.

Denmark a Market for Hats.

Consul John E. Kehl at Stettin informs the State Department that he has recently received a letter from a Copenhagen firm requesting addresses of American manufacturers of hats, and stating that Denmark would likely prove an excellent market for such goods. The Consul says that so far only one American house has shown any disposition to avail itself of the opportunity offered to capture this trade.

A THRIFTY GUEST.

A few years ago Mrs. Reeves paid a visit to some distant cousins—two rich old maiden ladies who live together in a remote village of Canada. On the night before she left their home, as the three sat on the veranda together, one of the hostesses remarked speculatively: "Well, it hasn't cost Drusilly and me so much as we thought it would to have you here. You see, every time you were invited out, we were asked, too, and that saved the price of a meal for each of us; so it almost evens up!"

This story has been a byword among the members of the Reeves family ever since, and only recently they have acquired a companion-piece which, Mrs. Reeves declares, balances it beautifully.

Their home is in Washington; so that it forms a convenient target for any and all of their friends who aim at "doing" the national capital, but their spirit of hospitality has never grown tired. Not long ago Mr. Reeves received word that his Uncle Abner and wife were coming to visit him.

"Now don't you think, Burton," Mrs. Reeves asked her husband, when she heard the news, "that it would do to let your Uncle Abner pay at least part of his own expenses while he's sightseeing round here? I wouldn't speak of it, only, you know, he has more money than he knows what to do with."

"That's true enough, my dear," admitted Mr. Reeves with his genial smile, "but he's going to be our guest, and I intend to give him and Aunt Huldah the time of their lives. I guess 'Drusilly and me' can manage to pay their car fare for a few days."

So Uncle Abner and Aunt Huldah came. Mr. Reeves met them at the station, and for the next week devoted himself to giving them a glorious holiday. Not a point of interest was missed; not a car line anywhere round Washington failed of patronage. Just once, in all their visit, the two went out together, unaccompanied, and the twenty-five cents that Uncle Abner paid for six car tickets on that occasion was the only money he spent while in Washington.

As they were riding to the train, in the street-car, on the morning of their departure, Mr. Reeves paid the fare as usual, and then dropped into a seat beside Uncle Abner.

"Well, uncle," he said, heartily, "I hope you're not sorry you came?"

"Oh, no," Uncle Abner replied, absently. He was fumbling in his pocket-book for something. At last he produced two car tickets. "Say, Burt," he said, "I had these left from the quarter's worth I bought the day your Aunt Huldah and I rode out to Cabin John's Bridge. They won't be any use to me after I leave here; so if you want to give me a dime and take 'em off my hands, we'll call it square!"—Youth's Companion.

PRESERVE THE BATTLEFIELDS.

Scenes of Cuban Conflicts Full of Historic Interest.

It is true that the great battles of the Civil War and those of the present one in Manchuria, where the men killed and wounded in a day outnumber all those who fought on both sides at San Juan, make that battle read like a skirmish. But the Spanish war had its results. At least it made Cuba into a republic, and so enriched or burdened us with colonies that our republic changed into something like an empire. But I do not urge that. It will never be because San Juan changed our foreign policy that people will visit the spot, and will send from it picture postal cards. The human interest alone will keep San Juan alive. The men who fought there came from every State in our country and from every class of our social life. We sent there the best of our regular army, and with them, cowboys, clerks, bricklayers, football players, three future commanders of the greater army that followed that war, the future Governor of Cuba, future commanders of the Philippines, the commander of our forces in China, a future President of the United States.

And, whether these men when they returned to their homes again became clerks, and millionaires and dentists, or rose to be presidents and mounted policemen, they all remember very kindly the days they lay huddled together in the trenches on that hot and glaring skyline. And there must be many more besides who hold the place in memory. There are few in the United States so poor in relatives and friends who did not in his or her heart send a substitute to Cuba. For these it seems as though San Juan might be better preserved, not as it is, for already its aspect is too far changed to wish for that, but as it was.—Scribner's.

USE GASOLINE FISHERS NOW.

Up-to-Date Men Find Them More Profitable than Sailing Craft.

Those who bewail the death of romance at sea because of the displacement of sail by steam have now another cause for woe. Whatever of romance lingered about a seafaring life in the opinion of these persons attached itself to the fishermen, those "captains courageous," who in little sail-driven dories risked their lives to supply the shore-living folks with food. Now, however, the fisherman is following his brother of the deep sea trade and is becoming a mere mechanic. Power is displacing all sail, even in the little fishing boat, and the picturesque groups of sloops and cutboats which were so familiar at the fishing villages a few years ago are fast giving place to ugly, mastless power launches, mostly of the gasoline and petroleum types.

The reason for this change is that the fisherman, who, even if he is picturesque, is a business man, has found that it pays. In the old days unfavorable weather might delay him for hours, or even days, in getting from the fishing grounds, and his fish were spoiled. Now he can figure almost to a certainty on the time of his run to market and he lands his fish in better condition and gets better prices.

In Narragansett bay, which is one of the sources of supply for New York, the fisherman can get to-day's catch into the markets to-morrow morning by running to Newport and catching the regular boats. Formerly it took a day longer and the result of this change is exemplified by the experience of a little partnership of three fishermen, who own a power boat, and who in the first year that they bought it cleaned up $5,000 in excess of the previous year's profits.—New York Times.

FIVE SHIFTS IN GARB A DAY.

Conformity to Ranking Officer's Dress Kept 4,000 Navy Men Busy.

Four thousand officers and bluejackets, constituting the crews of five first-class battleships and one gunboat, now in the New York navyyard, changed their uniforms simultaneously five times Sunday, says the New York Times. The reason of so much changing of dress was due to the regulation which requires that each officer and man must at all times wear a uniform to conform with that worn by the commanding or senior officer of the fleet or squadron.

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, the commander-in-chief of the North Atlantic fleet, five of whose battleships are at the navy-yard, is, of course, the ranking officer of the yard. He is away on leave of absence. Next to him comes Rear Admiral Coghlan, the commander of the yard. After him comes Rear Admiral Davis, commanding the second division of the battleship squadron. However, it was said, absences of commanding officers were frequent, and this made the ranking a good deal of a puzzle to anybody but a navy man.

At any rate, the officers and men of the Kearsarge, Kentucky, Alabama, Maine and Missouri and the second class gunboat Dubuque had to make some lightning changes of dress. The changes began at reveille, when a signal from the Alabama showed that the commanding officer was going to breakfast dressed in blue.

This information was quickly wigwagged to all the ships and when the men lined up for mess each of them was clad in the blue uniform of the service. After breakfast the men lounged about decks or strolled around the yard. About 10 o'clock another signal was wigwagged from the flagship. The signal was to the effect that the ranking officer was wearing a white cap. Ten minutes later all the officers and nearly 3,500 men had discarded their caps of blue and had reappeared in caps made of pure white duck.

The next change was at the lunch hour. Hardly had that meal ended when there was some more wigwagging between the ships. The commanding officer was in the full uniform of white duck. Half an hour later the officers still on ships and every bluejacket on ship or in the yard had returned from a hurried visit to his quarters, where he had changed the blue for the white duck.

Six bells sounded. When the jingle died away the ranking officer wore his cap of blue. So did everybody else a little later.

Just before the dinner call another signal appeared. "Off with the white and on with the blue" is a literal translation of what the man with the signal flags said. It was nearly sundown, but the interval between signal and mess call was sufficient for another rapid change of garb and when the "last call for dinner" sounded the decks of every battleship and the little gunboat showed formations of smart seamen, every one of whom was clad in the full blue uniform of the United States service.

"I believe we hold the record in shooting, but I know we hold it when changing clothes is under discussion," remarked an officer as he darted around a twelve-inch turret on his way to his quarters to change his white duck for a blue uniform.

BLOOD POISON MAN'S GREATEST ENEMY

The disease that has done more than any other to wreck, ruin and humiliate life, is Contagious Blood Poison. Sorrow, shame and suffering go hand in hand with this great enemy, and man has always hated and fought it as he has no other disease. It is the most powerful of all poisons; no matter how pure the blood may be, when its virus enters, the entire circulation becomes poisoned and its chain of horrible symptoms begin to show. Usually the first sign is a small sore or ulcer, not at all alarming in appearance, but the blood is being saturated with the deadly poison, and soon the mouth and throat begin to ulcerate, the hair and eyebrows drop out, a red eruption breaks out on the body, copper-colored splotches and sores make their appearance and the poison even works down into the bones and attacks the nerves. Not only is the disease hereditary, being transmitted from parent to child, in the form of scrofula, weak eyes, soft bones, weak, puny constitutions, etc., but is also so highly contagious that many a life has been ruined by a friendly hand shake, or from using the toilet articles of one infected with the poison. To cure this blighting, deadly cure the blood must be purified, and nothing will do it so quickly and surely as S. S. S. It goes down to the very bottom of the trouble, drives out every particle of the poison and makes the blood clean and strong. It does not hide or cover up anything, but from the first begins to expel the poison and build up and strengthen the system. S. S. S. is guaranteed purely vegetable. We offer a reward of $1,000 for proof that it contains a particle of mineral of any kind. Book on the disease, with instructions for home treatment, and any advice desired, without charge.
