

For Lung Troubles

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral certainly cures coughs, colds, bronchitis, consumption. And certainly strengthens weak throats and weak lungs. There can be no mistake about this. You know it is true. And your own doctor will say so.

My little boy had a terrible cough. I tried everything I could hear of but it didn't get any better, and he steadily improved until he was cured by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. — Mrs. S. J. Smith, Alton, Ill.

A Hard Question.

Modern Maid—I wish some advice. Lady—Certainly, my dear. What?

Modern Maid—Shall I marry a man who is the opposite of mine, and whose tastes are the same as mine and get tired of him?

The Search for Paul Jones' Body.

Word of the coming home of the body of Paul Jones, to rest in the crypt of the new Naval Academy, lies the story of General Horace Porter's six months' quest, impeded by many obstacles, successful at last, with overwhelming evidence in favor of the identification of the body. The full story of the search General Porter tells for the first time in the October Century. Upon assuming charge of our embassy in Paris and finding myself among the old landmarks which are honored there as recalling the historic incidents in the sojourn of Paul Jones in that brilliant capital, General Porter, "I felt a deep sense of humiliation as an American in realizing that our first and greatest naval hero had been forgotten and forgotten grave and that no attempt had ever been made to recover his remains and give them appropriate sepulture in the land upon whose history he had shed so much blood."

How She Landed Him.

Papa told me to tell you you can't come here any more. He says you're a dangerous man. I said—Dangerous man! What does that mean? He says you're the sort of a fellow who will hang around a girl for an hour and never marry her.

Friendly Criticism.

James remarked Jagsby, "Is a place for snakes. I once saw a yellow snake down there 77 feet long and as big round as a whiskey barrel."

What I don't doubt it," rejoined Jagsby.

"But it's doughnuts to fudge with the whiskey barrel before you get the snake."

Somebody Different.

"What is the price of that antique?" asked the lady shopper. "Fifty dollars, madam," replied the clerk. "You've mistaken?" queried the lady hunter. "It certainly can't be that much."

Castor Oil.

"Nor are they here, madam," quickly replied the young man, bowing politely.

"Don't Hustle the Boss."

Teddy (aged eight) in the morning had received instructions from his father "never to hurry his elders"—once he had asked for a thing he should rest patiently, waiting their convenience to get around to it.

Teddy in the evening climbed into bed without saying his usual prayers. The intimate connection between these two events transpired a moment later, when Teddy's mamma asked why the prayers had been neglected.

"I've asked God for three nights to make Teddy a good boy, and if I ain't it's 'cause God's been kep' busy som'er's else. Pop says: 'Don't ever hurry the boss; an' I guess I ain't a-goin' to hurry God. He'll get round to me jes' as soon as he has time.'"

Explained.

There is a well-known story told by Dean Ramsey years ago of two old ladies in his church.

"Was it no' a wonderful thing," said one of them, "that the Breethish were aye victorious over the French in battle?"

"Not a bit," said the other, "dinna ye ken the Breethish say their prayers before gaen into battle?"

"Aye," returned the first, "but canna the French say their prayers as weel?"

The reply was: "Hoot, jabbering bodies, wha could understand them?"

Fatal Equality.

The drawbacks to social equality come out in domestic service, if they appear at all.

A correspondent reports this conversation between an American lady living in Manila and one of her Filipino servants:

"Ramar," said she, "why is it that you worked so well for the Spaniards, and did it for so little? They treated you very badly, and I treat you well. They paid you only two pesos a month, and you ask twenty-five of me. I don't understand it."

"Ah, senora," said Ramar, "the Spaniards are our superiors. You Americans are our equals."

Laughs at $5 Each.

"Insulting behavior" is a very elastic charge in Australia. It may cover anything from pitch-and-toss to manslaughter. Its latest application comes from Bendigo.

In that golden city, where the late Marquis of Salisbury tried his luck as a digger, the authorities of a Methodist Church, decided to suppress juvenile giggling. They introduced a policeman in plain clothes, and he detected a couple of small boys laughing during the evening service.

The boys were brought into court on a charge of "insulting behavior" and fined $5 each.—London Chronicle.

A Telling Retort.

A telling retort was made by a commercial traveler to an unkind remark made by a young woman whom he had met at the house of a friend.

The young woman, of New England origin, inquired the occupation of the young man.

"I am a commercial traveler," quietly remarked the young man.

"Ah, indeed!" she returned, in a very patronizing manner. "Do you know that in my part of the country commercial travelers are not received in good society?"

"Nor are they here, madam," quickly replied the young man, bowing politely.

OLD Favorites

Over the Hill to the Poor House. Over the hill to the poorhouse, I'm trodgin' my weary way—

I, a woman of seventy, and only a trifle gray— I, who am smart and chipper, for all the years I've toiled, As many another woman that's only hail an' old.

Over the hill to the poorhouse—I can't quite make it clear; Over the hill to the poorhouse—it seems so horrid queer!

Many a step I've taken a-tollin' to and fro, But this is all the journey I never thought to go.

What is the use of heapin' on me a pauper's shame? Am I lazy or crazy? Am I blind or lame? True, I am not so supple, nor yet so awful stout; But charity sin't no favor, if one can live without.

I am willin' and anxious an' ready any day To work for a decent livin' an' pay my honest way; For I can earn my victuals, an' more, too, I'll be bound, If any-b'dy is willin' to have me round.

Once I was young an' handsome—I was, upon my soul— Once my cheeks was roses, my eyes as black as coal; And I can't remember, in them days, of hearin' no body say, 'Fore any kind of a reason, that I was in their way.

'Tain't no use of boastin', or talkin' over free; But many a house an' home was open then to me; Many a han'some offer I had from likely men, And nobody ever hinted that I was a burden then.

And when to John I was married, sure he was good an' smart, (but he and all the neighbors would own I dote my part; For life was all before me, an' I was young an' strong, And I worked the best that I could in tryin' to get along.

And so we worked together; and life was hard, but gay, With now and then a baby for to cheer us on our way; Till we had half a dozen, an' all growed clean an' neat, An' went to school, like others, an' had 'nough to eat.

So we worked for the child'n, and raised 'em every one; Worked for 'em summer an' winter, just as we ought to've done; Only perhaps we humored 'em, which some good folks condemn, But every couple's child'n's a heap the best to them.

Strange how much we think of our blessed little ones!— I'd have died for my daughters, I'd have died for my sons; And God He made that rule of love; but when we're old and gray, I've noticed it sometimes somehow falls to work the other way.

Strange, another thing; when our boys an' girls was grown, And when, exceptin' Charley, they'd left us there alone; When John he nearer an' nearer come, an' dearer seemed to be, The Lord of Hosts He come one day, an' took him away from me.

Still I was bound to struggle, an' never to cringe or fall; Still I worked for Charley, for Charley was now my all; And Charley was pretty good to me, with scarce a word or frown, Till at last he went a-courtin', and brought a wife from town.

She was somewhat dressy, an' hadn't a pleasant smile; She was quite conceited, and carried a heap of style; But if ever I tried to be friends, I did with her, I know; But she was hard and proud, an' I couldn't make it go.

She had an education, an' that was good for her; But whiesh she lectured me on mine, 't was carryin' things too far; An' I told her once, 'fore company (an' 't almost made her sick), That I never swallowed a grammar, or 'et a 'rithmetic.

So 'twas only a few days before the thing was done— They was a family of themselves, and I an' other one; And a very little cottage one family will do, But I never have seen a house that was big enough for two.

An' I never could speak to suit her, never could please her eye, An' I made me independent, an' then I didn't try; But I was terribly staggered, an' felt it like a blow.

When Charley turned ag'in me, an' told me I could go. I went to live with Susan, but Susan's house was small, And she was always a-hintin' how 'snug it was for us all; And what with her husband's sisters, and what with child'n three, 'Twas easy to discover that there wasn't room for me.

An' then I went to Thomas, the oldest son I've got; For Thomas's buildings'd cover the half of an acre lot; But all the child'n was on me—I couldn't stand their squall; I nedd'n't think I was comin' there to boss.

And then I wrote to Rebecca, my girl who lives out West, And to Isaac, not far from her—some twenty miles at best; And one of 'em said 'twas too warm there for anyone so old, And t'other had an opinion the climate was too cold.

So they have shirked and slighted me, an' shifted me about— So they have well-nigh soured me, an' wore my old heart out; But still I've borne up pretty well, an' wasn't much put down, Till Charley went to the poormaster, an' put me on the town.

Over the hill to the poorhouse—my child'n's dear, good-by; Many a night I've watched you when only God was nigh; And God'll judge between us, but I will a'ways pray That you shall never suffer the half I do to-day.

She Jumped at It.

Mr. Laylor—We traveling men are thinking of organizing. Miss Niederman (vaguely)—Yes? Mr. Laylor—Yes. I wonder what the public would think of our union? Miss Niederman—Oh, Mr. Laylor, this is so sudden!—Philadelphia Ledger.

FOR UNIFORM DIVORCE.

Action Toward Uniform Legislation for Correction of Shocking Abuse.

The Governors of the various States of the Union are to be the leaders of a great national movement for the correction of the present loose laws of divorce. The present unfortunate lack of uniformity which makes it possible for dissatisfied couples to go from one State to another, and gain a divorce for trivial causes, is to be corrected by having a law that shall be uniform in all parts of the United States. Then there will be no more trips to Dakota, a six months' residence, and divorces granted that are really crimes against laws of morality.

The leader in this important fight is Gov. Samuel W. Pennypacker, of Pennsylvania. At a recent session of the Pennsylvania State Legislature an appropriation of $10,000 was made for the purpose of having the Governor call for a national congress, consisting of three men from each State, to be appointed by the Governors. These are to draw up a uniform law which is afterward to be adopted by the Legislatures of each State. In this way a uniform law can be secured, and at the same time each State retains its right to regulate its own laws on the subject of matrimony.

The bill was introduced into the Legislature by Senator William C. Sprout, of Delaware County. Gov. Pennypacker knew all its provisions in advance, and was the more in favor of it because President Roosevelt in a message to Congress has thought the matter of sufficient moment to devote to it a considerable amount of discussion, and to recommend action to secure uniform laws.

In his speeches and arguments Gov. Pennypacker contends with great force that the laws should be so arranged that no person could obtain a divorce without very grave cause, and that above all it should not be possible to get in a legal way in a foreign State that which is not legally possible in one's commonwealth. He points out the farce of letting persons take up a six months' domicile in another commonwealth, and says that the first provision of the new law should be a strict order that the divorce must be granted in the State in which the applicants lived. He shows convincingly that the evil of divorce has become a national menace.

"A few years ago," he says, "there were unhappy marriages, as there will always be, but the divorce was comparatively rare, for people considered marriage a serious thing, a tie that could only be dissolved for the most flagrant causes. That a change has come over the general public is due in the first place to the publicity given to the decency-defying divorces of the rich. Others have felt that if the rich dare quickly and openly cast off ties that begin to bore, they could do likewise. As a result, divorce is extending all over the country, and the good effect of preventive legislation in some States is nullified in others, where divorce is granted to all who apply."

Numerous messages from more than a score of States have been received by Gov. Pennypacker in reply to his call to the different Governors to unite in concerted action for the preservation of the purity of the American home. Gov. Dawson, of West Virginia, writes: "I am thoroughly in sympathy with this movement and shall be glad to appoint delegates to such a congress." In practically similar strain other Governors write, all pledging support of the movement, which its advocates believe will put an end to the present shockingly indecent system of divorce.

Domestic Economics. The man whose thrifty choice of a wife is chronicled in the Rochester Herald will doubtless make a success in the business of life. His talents destined him for a wider sphere than that of a simple farmer's life. He was an Alabama youth, and courted two girls at the same time. One was Sally; the other was Mary.

Sally was a very fine girl, thrifty, industrious, and of a domestic turn. She was not so pretty as some other girls, but James, the swain in question, had courted her in his early years. When he had prospered and earned a little money, he became infatuated with Mary, sweet, pretty, but always idle. The neighbors at first were puzzled by the double courtship, but after a while they decided that Mary was the favored one.

Suddenly James married Sally. The Methodist preacher who performed the ceremony had a little of the curiosity which possesses all mankind.

"James," he said, "we all thought you were going to marry Mary."

"Yes," replied James, "but I thought if I married Mary I should have to engage Sally to wait on her. If I married Sally she would wait on herself."

Spiteful. "She got so many freckles last summer and she says they worry her so."

"The idea! I should think they'd be a comfort to her. She can blame her bad looks on them."—Philadelphia Press.

No Exception. Burglar—All I want is your money, lady! Old Maid—Go away, wretch—you're just like all the other men I know!—Smart Set.

GOOD BLOOD TELLS ITS OWN STORY

And tells it eloquently in the bright eye, the supple, elastic movement, the smooth, soft skin, glowing with health, a body sound and well, an active brain, good appetite and digestion, refreshing sleep, energy to perform the duties and capacity to enjoy the pleasures of life. The blood is the most vital part of the body; every organ, muscle, tissue, nerve, sinew and bone is dependent on it for nourishment and strength, and as it circulates through the system, pure and intended. When, from any cause, the blood becomes impure or diseased, it tells a different story, quite as forceful in its way. Itching, burning skin diseases, muddy, sallow complexions, disfiguring sores, boils, carbuncles, etc., show the presence, in the blood, of some foreign matter or poison. Rheumatism, Catarrh, Contagious Blood Poison and Scrofula, are effects of a deeply poisoned blood circulation. These may either be inherited or acquired, but the seat of trouble is the same—the blood. S. S. S., a purely vegetable blood remedy, cleanses and purifies the circulation and makes it strong and clean. Under its purifying and tonic effects all poisons and impurities are expelled from the blood, the general health is built up, all disfiguring eruptions and blemishes disappear, the skin becomes soft and smooth and robust health blesses life. Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Contagious Blood Poison and all diseases of the blood are cured by S. S. S. Book on the blood and any medical advice, free of charge.
