

SORES THAT DO NOT HEAL

Whenever a sore or ulcer does not heal, no matter on what part of the body it may be, it is because of a poisoned condition of the blood. This condition may be the remains of some constitutional trouble; the effect of a long spell of sickness, which has left this vital stream polluted and weak, because the natural refuse matter of the body, which should pass off through the channels of nature, has been left in the system and absorbed into the circulation. It does not matter how the poison became entrenched in the blood, the fact that the sore is there and does not heal is evidence of a deep, underlying cause. There is nothing that causes more discomfort, anxiety and distress than a festering, discharging sore that resists treatment. The very sight of it is abhorrent and suggests pollution and disease; besides the time and attention required to keep it clean and free from other matters. As it lingers, slowly eating deeper into the surrounding flesh, the sufferer grows morbidly anxious, fearing it may be cancerous. Some of those afflicted with an old sore or ulcer know how useless it is to expect a cure from salves, powders, lotions and other external treatment. Through the use of these they have only the place begin to heal and scab over, and are congratulating themselves that they would soon be rid of the detestable thing, when a fresh supply of poison from the blood causes the inflammation and old discharge to return and the sore would be as bad or worse than before. Sores that do not heal are not due to outward causes; if they were, external treatment would cure them. They are kept open because the blood is steeped in poison, which finds an outlet through these places. While young people, and even children, sometimes suffer with non-healing sores, those most usually afflicted are persons past middle life. Often, with them, a wart or mole on the face inflames and becomes ulcerate from a little rough handling; or a deep, offensive ulcer develops from a slight cut or bruise. Their vital energies and powers of resistance have grown less, and circulation weaker, and perhaps some taint in the blood, which was held in check by their stronger constitutions of early life, shows itself. It is well to be suspicious of any sore that does not heal readily, because the same germ that produces Cancer is back of every old sore and only needs to be left in the circulation to produce this fatal disease. There is only one way to cure these old sores and ulcers, and that is to get every particle of the poison out of the blood. For this purpose nothing equals S. S. S. It goes down to the very bottom of the trouble, cleanses the blood and makes a permanent cure. S. S. S. enriches and freshens the circulation that carries new, strong blood to the diseased parts and allows the place to heal naturally. When this is done the discharge ceases, the sore scabs over and fills in with healthy flesh, and the skin regains its natural color. S. S. S. cures sores and ulcers and any medical advice desired will be furnished without charge.

I have had a crippled foot all my life, which compelled me to use a brace. By some unaccountable means this brace caused a bad ulcer on my leg, about six years ago. I had good medical attention, but the ulcer got worse. I was induced to try S. S. S., and am glad to say it cured me entirely, and I am convinced that it saved my leg for me. I have, therefore, great faith in S. S. S., and gladly recommend it to all needing a reliable blood medicine.

LAWYERS.

I have seen something of legal practice on both sides of the Atlantic, and my opinion is that our profession is not quite so much as they are in the United States and Canada, says a writer in the London Sunday Review. It is obvious that our lawyers would profit by such an exchange. They would have the right to appear in all courts and the opportunity to qualify themselves for admission to the bench.

American the young lawyer goes to an office, where he makes his name known by steady attention to his duties. There will always be two classes of lawyers—those who stay in the office, dealing directly with clients, and those who advise on points of law and argue cases in court. The two orders of men are clearly marked in America, but they are together as partners to the great advantage of the client.

Somewhat Similar.
Men and men are very much alike in one respect," said the home philosopher.

"What's the answer?" queried the perplexed youth.
"The answer," explained the philosopher, "is that the fish they didn't catch and women lie about the men would have married had they had a chance."

Never Smiled Again.
How do you manage to write all those things?" asked the inquisitive female of the jokesmith.
"With a typewriter, madam," answered the jokesmith, "and the so-much-per-yard grin produced."

"Don't," exclaimed the f. f. "Don't," I imagined you used some of those copying apparatus."

Frequent Occasions.
You must try to love your papa as he loves you," said the visitor.
"I love him more," replied Tom.

"Doesn't your papa love you much?"
"He says he only loves me 'cause I'm good."—Philadelphia.

A NOVEL ADVERTISEMENT.

It Appeared in a Recent Issue of a London Newspaper.
A HOPELESSLY INCOMPETENT FOOL, with no qualifications, social or intellectual, totally devoid of knowledge on any conceivable subject, thoroughly indolent and untrustworthy, is desirous of obtaining a remunerative post in any capacity. Address L. F. S., MacLure road, West Kensington.

The sublime candor of the above advertisement which appeared in a recent issue of the London Times has caused some amusement and attracted a great deal of attention among business men, says the London Express.

Many declared that "L. F." was a practical joker; others that he had a definite object in view when he made himself out to be a fool.

That this latter solution was the correct one an Express representative learned yesterday from "L. F." himself. His object, he said, was to attract the attention of employers by going out of the beaten track.

"L. F.," who is about 27 years old, is rather more alert and intelligent than the average man with an ordinary public school education, and his face is a particularly honest one.

"I thought if I said exactly the opposite to what most people in search of a billet insert in the newspapers," he said, "I might stand a good chance of hearing from employers tired of superlative virtues, and I have not been disappointed."

"I have this morning received two genuine offers and appointments for interviews from the heads of good firms and a large number of letters and post cards from practical jokers. It was inevitable, of course, that three or four of the writers should have advised me to apply at once to the war office, where I would be sure of a billet."

"I have been schoolmastering seven years, and although I have a small billet now, I wish to better myself."

All the Comforts of Home.
"Nat" Goodwin, the comedian, once possessed a fine country house on the banks of the Thames River, near New-London, Connecticut. Every summer he used to invite some of his Thespian friends to join his house party.

On one such occasion Goodwin delivered himself of a bon mot that is worth repeating.

"Nat," said some one, "you certainly have a fine place here. Just think of it, a lawn right on the river!"

"Yes," drawled "Nat," "it's fine. In the spring we have the lawn on the river, and in the fall we have the river on the lawn."

English-Speaking People.
English is now spoken by about 125,000,000 people. A century ago it was spoken by 20,000,000 people only. During that period no other leading European language has made the slightest advance. German has held its own, and is now spoken by 80,000,000, but this is no higher percentage of the total number of people of European descent than it had a hundred years ago.

Corrects a Misapprehension.
"Wasn't that same young man here to see you last night?"
"Yes, papa."

"Well, what does he mean by coming every night in the week?"
"He doesn't come every night in the week. I never met him until last Thursday, and he was only here Thursday and Friday and Saturday evenings."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It uses in a year 48,000,000 goat skins, 24,000,000 sheep skins, 10,000,000 hides of all kinds, nine million calf skins, and two million other skins. It imports all its goat skins, a total amount of about $25,000,000 worth, and over $10,000,000 worth of hides and over $17,000,000 worth of other skins, a total of over $50,000,000 worth of hides and skins. Germany imports one-third less hides and skins than does this country, and England and France each import one-half as much.

A formidable list of persons killed and injured in one month by eating adulterated food has been compiled by a current magazine. The list of the dead include four persons who died from eating foodstuffs mixed with mushrooms, three poisoned by candy, three by wood alcohol contained in lemon extract, and many by the same substance in whisky; four infected by typhoid fever germs contained in ice cream, twin babies poisoned by formaldehyde used to preserve milk, and hundreds of persons poisoned by beer manufactured from glucose, in the manufacture of which sulphuric acid, made from an arsenic bearing mineral has been used. Many of these cases were reported by health officers and food commissioners of the various States in which they occurred.

HE GAVE WHAT HE HAD.
East Avenue, on the beautiful campus of Cornell University, is shaded by a row of elm-trees, each end of the line marked by a small brown stone bearing the inscription, "Ostrander Elms."

Henry W. Sage, whose name stands next to that of Extra Cornell on the roll of the benefactors of the university, told the story of these trees in an address at Cornell several years ago. After speaking of many things that had been done for the young college, he said:

And last, not least, a gift which has always had for me a fragrance akin to that of the widow's mite immortalized in Scripture. John B. Ostrander, a man remarkable for his integrity and humility, after having served me twenty-five years in the forests of Canada and Michigan, returned at the age of 70 to Dryden, his native town, to spend there his declining years.

Meeting me one day, he said: "Henry, I have been to the university grounds and seen the work in progress, and feel as if I want to do something to help it along. Now I have no money, but I have some fine young elms in my woods, and I can bring down thirty or forty and plant them there. They will look well, and will make a shade for somebody after you and I are gone."

I replied, "They are just what we want. Bring them, and they shall be known as the Ostrander Elms."

Those are the elms on East Avenue, and a stone at each end marks the name of the donor. The shadow of death has rested over his tomb several years, and not long hence will rest over mine, but the elms remain, and a hundred years hence the shadows of their graceful foliage will attest the loving gift he made us—they will make a shade for somebody."

BUYING LARGER FARMS.

Rural Population Decreasing As Wealth Increases.

It seems a paradox, but is nevertheless well established as true, that in certain of the best farming regions of the United States great and abounding agricultural prosperity has resulted in decreased rural population. A no less striking than surprising illustration of this is given in a recent State census report of Iowa, which is reported to show a falling off of 2 per cent in the population of that great and glorious State since the general census of 1900. Of course, such a result was not acceptable to Iowa's pride, and it was not readily accepted. Close inquiry, however, is reported not only to confirm the general correctness of the new count, but to show a sufficient reason for its disappointing result.

The explanation offered is that it is all due to the land hunger of the prosperous Iowa farmer. Having money ahead and well knowing that good farm land in the Mississippi valley is one of the safest and most profitable of investments, he has been buying in the adjoining farms of his less fore-handed neighbors to such an extent, the reports say, that vacant farm-houses dot every township in the State. Many of these vacant farmhouses may again be occupied by the sons and sons-in-law of the purchaser; some of them will be abandoned, and the newly acquired lands consolidated into larger farms. And if Iowa follows the course of development that has been going on for many years in the magnificent farming regions of Central Illinois, the consolidated farms will be leased in tracts of 80 or 320 acres, or more, to thrifty and prosperous tenant farmers.

The process as it has gone in Illinois for a number of years is that the wealthier land owner buys out the 40 and 80-acre farms of his neighbors, tile drains and otherwise improves them, often renting the same land or larger tracts to the vendors, who generally made more money as tenants than they had done as owners. The tenant farmers of Central Illinois put their capital into the best of farm implements and machinery and live stock. Their prosperity is seen in their comfortable and well furnished houses, the well kept vehicles and horses which their families drive to church and to country gatherings. In Central Illinois just now the tendency is to larger farms, the tenant generally desiring to increase his area and the landlord regulating the quantity of land he will lease by the proved capacity and success of each tenant. For its best farm lands Iowa appears to be approaching the same system.—Springfield Republican.

When Michael Burke joined his brother James in this country, the money he brought over, added to James's savings, enabled them to go into the ice business. In course of time their custom increased, and it became necessary for them to have an office. In this James soon installed a nice roll-top desk.

"The one desk will do for the two of us," he explained, the day it was set up. "And here are two keys; one for you, Micky, and one for me."

Michael accepted the key, but seemed to be studying the desk.
"That's all right," he said. "But where is my keyhole?"
