Miss Anna Belknap was a visitor in town on Saturday last from Haystack. Go to the Grizzly L. Lumber Yard for your doors and windows, at prices that make you smile. The registration books are now open at the office of F. J. Brooks, justice of the peace. Go and register before it is too late. Fred Wallace has disposed of his interest in the Laidlaw Chronicle to J. Donohue, with whom he was a partner in the paper. Henry Deitzel returned Tuesday from a 10 days' visit at his old home in The Dalles. He also visited Portland during his absence. The petition of John Wagenblast and others for the establishment of a county road was approved, and surveyors and viewers were ordered to survey out the road and report. They meet on February 19, 1906. The road petitioned for runs due west from the L. A. Young store for about four miles, then runs north until it intercepts the Frank Eikins road.

Prineville Review: L. T. Jones, a special agent belonging to the interior department, was here the latter part of last week. He was returning from a tour of inspection of the Agency Plains country, where he found everything O. K. Mr. Jones laughingly said he wasn't after any body in Prineville. He left on Sunday stage for Portland. Tygy Valley Bee: While clearing brush on the Mays ranch a few days ago Joe Krause found the body of a large beaver pioned to the earth by a tree. It appears that two beavers were at work cutting down trees, and when one of them got his tree cut it fell in such a manner as to catch the animal by the large, flat tail, and holding it captive till death came.

William H. Brock, of the Bend country, was in town yesterday on his way home from a two months' visit in Portland. Mr. Brock is one of the famous bear hunters of Central Oregon, and had with him two of his celebrated hounds, Nip and Tuck. These dogs have already killed 23 bears in the Bend country, and Mr. Brock expects them to increase this number considerably during the coming spring.
