 The old established firm of Wurzweller & Thomson has been dissolved. The interests of A. Thomson and Arthur Hodges have been bought by Wurzweller Co., who will continue the business at the old stand. It was on August 27, 1897, when Wurzweller & Thomson bought out M. Sichel & Co., and three years later, on July 1, 1900, Arthur Hodges purchased an interest in the firm. The business is one of the largest in the county and has been very prosperous.—Crook County Journal.
 Now is the time to buy your grain drills and if you are looking around to find one that will suit you we will be pleased to show you the "New Kentucky" made in the disc, shoe, hoe, press and broadcast drills. The disc drills are the favorites; they have the hard oil cups with screw caps, adjustable spring scrapers, steel ribbon tubes, large sizes have two tongues and the feed can be adjusted so as to sow as little as desired without cracking the grain. Call and get our prices before buying. Sanford, Sill & Co.
UPSET IN MIDSTREAM
Logging Crew Has Narrow Escape in Rapids of the Metoles.
 It is reported here that U. S. Cowles, J. W. Jackson, Andrew Larsen, Jr., and Clarence Watts had a narrow escape from drowning, last Thursday, while attempting to cross the Metoles River, where they have been driving logs for the Cowles sawmill. While crossing the stream in a boat, in the rapids, they were unable to land where they had expected to, and the boat swinging out into the stream again, struck against a log that had lodged and was upset in midstream, throwing the occupants into the water at a point where there was apparently no bottom and where the current is very swift. Cowles was washed down stream for fully fifty feet, after being thrown from the boat, before he came to the surface again, but the other members of the party managed to get hold of the boat, to which they clung until it reached a point where the river was shallower and where they could make a landing. Meanwhile Mr. Cowles had also made a landing at some distance down the stream. Watts, who could not swim, came near drowning before they could get him to the boat. When he first came to the surface after his plunge into the water, he grappled one of the others and came near pulling him under, but they finally succeeded in getting him to the overturned boat, and later to the bank of the stream.

FRED J. DAMON, Madras, Oregon

JOIN RUSH TO NEW GOLD FIELDS

J. W. Robinson and Richard Baird left last Monday for the Coyote Hills neighborhood, in Lake county, where they expect to spend several weeks prospecting in the newly discovered gold fields of that locality. Both are seasoned veterans of the hills, and tempted by the numerous reports of the richness of the Lake county discovery, they have gone to see for themselves. They will go first to the Coyote Hills, but expect to also prospect much of the surrounding territory. They
