Politeness Pays.
Virtue is not to be measured by ostentatious giving. There is frequently real love for humanity in the heart of the man who removes the mean skin from the pavement than in the heart of the donor of the merciful window in the church. Politeness, like all other faults and virtues, may become habitual. It is surprising how many small acts of kindness, how many little deeds of helpfulness, one may do in the course of a day when there are inclination to be kind and a patient kept for the opportunity. One who sets out with this intention in the morning, and the footing up at night—then, but to one's own secret conscience—will be cheering and encouraging.

Urgent Need of Information.
The learned traveler had delivered his last lecture on the manners and customs of old Japan.
"And now," he said, in conclusion, "I will be pleased to answer questions pertaining to any peculiarities of this interesting people upon which I may not have touched in my discourse."
"Professor," eagerly asked a young married woman in the audience, "what do the Japanese do to plumb juice to make it?"

In the Opera Box.
Miss Peachley—What funny sleeves yours are!
Miss Capiscum—Yes; I have been fighting in them at that gown of yours.

To Make Harness Last Longer.
A little economy, which sometimes means a good many dollars to a man, is a proper care of harness, carriage seats, etc. Leather in daily use, exposed as it is to sun and wind, soon becomes dry, hard, inelastic, and unable to stand strain. Then, very likely at the most unfortunate moment, a break occurs, and precious time and money are lost. All this is easily prevented by a little forethought and care on the part of the owner. Every one owning harness should be supplied with a good leather preservative, and a good axle oil. These two things are necessary to the largest economical use of a working harness, or a pleasure equipage.
Observation has shown that no oil penetrates leather so deeply, and resists the drying effect of sun and wind so well as Eureka Harness Oil.
Saddlery and some other inferior harnesses sometimes used, easily become rancid, or because of containing acid, hurt the leather. Stable men and others who look after the subject, invariably use Eureka Harness Oil. When harness is given an occasional dressing of this oil, the wagon spindles greased with Boston Coach Oil, a very large reduction is made in the necessary repair bills. Boston Coach Oil, by the way, is very superior to Castor Oil. It has splendid lasting qualities, will not gum up, and is more economical in every way.
People who are after economy in stable management will do well to ask for Eureka oils.

The Tempest.

We were crowded in the cabin,
Not a soul would dare to sleep;
It was midnight on the waters
And a storm was on the deep.
'Tis a fearful thing in winter
To be shattered by the blast,
And to hear the rattling trumpet thunder,
'Cut away the mast.'

So we gathered there in silence,
For the stoutest held his breath,
While the angry waves were rolling,
And the breakers talked of death;
And as thus we sat in darkness,
Each one busy in his prayers,
'We are lost,' the Captain shouted,
As he staggered down the stairs.

But his little daughter whispered,
As she took his icy hand:
'Isn't God upon the ocean,
Just the same as on the land?'
Then he kissed the little maiden,
And we spoke in better cheer—
And we anchored safe in harbor,
When the morn was shining clear.
—Nathan Parker.

The Great Old Man.
"How seldom, friend, a good great man inherits
Honor and wealth with all his worth and pains!
It sounds like stories from the land of spirits,
If any man obtain that which he merits,
Or any merit that which he obtains!"
For shame, dear friend, renounce this canting strain;
What wouldst thou have a great good man obtain:
Place—title—salary—a gilded chain—
Or throne on corpses which his sword hath slain?
Greatness and goodness are not means, but ends!
Hath he not always treasures, always friends,
The good great man?—Three treasures, love and light,
And calm thoughts regular as infant's breath—
And three firm friends more sure than day and night—
Himself, his Maker and the angel Death.
—Samuel Taylor Coleridge.

"Oriented" Orientals.

Knowledge of direction seems to be instinctive with the Burmans, says the author of "A People at School." They always reckon by the needle, not by relative position. They do not say "Turn to the right," but "Turn to the west." If a table in a room has two tumbler on it, one of them will be the east tumbler, the other the west, and the table itself will be not the "table near the window," but the "table in the east of the room." So they speak of the north or south side of a street or of a tree, not the shady or sunny side. Even in rain or mist they know the direction at once. An English traveler, walking in the Burman forest on a foggy morning to find all trace of the road wiped out by rain and every apparent means of ascertaining direction gone, was at a loss what to do, but his Burman servants knew at once. "That is north," they said, pointing, "and that is east. Our course lies between," and straight to the northeast they marched unerringly.

Three boxes cured me entirely, and I am glad to recommend them."

OLD Favorites

They are men who work. Sometimes they have opportunities to invest money advantageously. It is a trifle too uncertain, too energetic, too masterful. The mass of young Paris doctors, barristers, functionaries, professors—and all army officers—can be depended on to make model French husbands. I know the case of a young doctor whose ambition is to write a book on French watering places. To my certain knowledge he has three fine girls with ample marriage portions chasing after him. The mother of one said the other day: "I told him I would make Berthe's portion $65,000 and pay my own expenses if he would agree on his word of honor that I should go with them."
"A dream of happiness!" her gossip replied. "Your daughter pigeonholed; a swell son-in-law, with nothing to do, always beside you."
"And the relations, my dear—think of his relations! (She referred to his professional relations.) We would fit from one watering place to another, hotels at half price, douches and inhalations for nothing, jump immediately into the best medical sets of Vichy, Bourboule, Uriage, Contrexeville, Vittel, Plombieres."
"While he is writing his book?"
"Exactly, my dear! Provided he doesn't write it too quickly! If he marries Berthe I'll see to that!"
She need not worry. The young fellow will see to it himself—that book will be his life work; that and the daily jolly of Berthe.

JOSIE'S ICE-CREAM.

It was next to the very last day of school, and Miss Barton's kindergarten was all excitement, says the Chicago News, for there was going to be a party. "What is ice cream?" asked Josie Czelewski, timidly, of a little boy in her room, whom she met on her way to school that morning. He stared at her scornfully. "Huh!" he snorted. "Huh!" Josie Czelewski shrunk into herself, abashed. Evidently it was an outrageous thing not to know about ice cream, and she was sorry she had asked. But still she wondered.
She had on her old, faded plaid dress which she had worn most of the year. Some of the others were dressed up because of the party, which had been coincident with the appearance of these enviable garments, was almost forgotten in her excitement over the ice cream. She knew what ice was like. Nobody could cook it. Ice cream must be the delicious acme of one's maddest dreams, judging from the raptures about her. She was afraid to display her ignorance again, so she waited with Spartan repression.
"You must be patient," Miss Barton warned them, when the janitor carried in the ice cream. Josie Czelewski watched with eyes that grew bigger and darker. The sawdust-covered ice almost started the tears. Was that ice cream? Away with dreams!
But no, a delectable, rosy, paper-shrouded block of something appeared. This was ice cream! She pressed her hands tightly together, and when the wooden plate was put into her lap, she stared at it, too happy to eat.
But she soon joined the others, whose spoons worked with clocklike rapidity. Never had Josie Czelewski imagined anything like the taste of it.
On a wooden chair Miss Barton was piling more of the paper-covered rosy slabs. Josie felt she could eat many, many more slabs. But alas! the wooden chair was empty. She glanced at it wistfully and started, for the paper on it was coated with a layer of melted ice cream from the burden it had carried. She tiptoed toward it. She gave one furtive glance about the busy room, and then, quicker than it takes to tell the shocking fact, Josie Czelewski bent over, and with her little pink tongue lapped up the equally pink melted ice cream from the chair. Miss Barton's eyes beheld the scene. She wavered, and then deliberately turned her back on it.
"Did you have a good time, Josie?" the teacher asked the little girl who had learned that afternoon what ice cream is like.
Josie turned starry eyes up at the teacher. "Yes'm," she breathed, fervently, "oh, yes'm!"

HER LITTLE MAN.

French Wife with Any Money Does Not Want Him to Work.

Frenchmen would sink into Innocence denude, says the Boston Herald, were it not for their females. Paris, in particular, is the paradise of the incompetent and lazy good-looker.
And, really, when a young husband brings a lump sum equal to his wife's dot, our American ideals may remain shocked at his contented laziness, but we find it hard to criticize with logic.
Pretty little Agnes B—, for example, had a $20,000 marriage portion from her mother and she was engaged to Paul G—.
"Do you give her only $20,000?" asked Paul's mother. "Make it $50,000 and I will give Paul the same."
Agnes' mother remaining obdurate, and Paul's refusing to make an unequal bargain, the young folks started life on $20,000 each in gilt-edged bonds, producing the joint income of $1,500—and here comes the point. Paul had promised Agnes not to work.
"If I quit father and mother it will not be to live my days alone," she said, while to Paul she murmured: "You will rather be with me all day than to go out and make money?"
After marriage it was up to Paul to make good.
"But we have only $1,500 a year," he argued, and being tempted of the devil he accepted a congenial situation at $25 per. And his young wife fell sick of it.
His own mother was uneasy and his mother-in-law scolded. His congenial occupation ought to be to jolly Agnes. Agnes grew anemic, pined, had headaches and emotional anxiety.
In the end they had to spend $1,200 in traveling to get her health back. Paul no longer works, and all is well.
No other country has anything like this proportion of incomes from long family accumulations, where breaking into capital is considered a crime. One consequence is that women quite as frequently as men may have their own revenues.
Now, as Jules Simon pointed out, the French married woman wishes, above all, security for the enjoyment of her "little man." She fears change and is an enemy to enterprise. A French girl with $20,000 marriage portion will certainly prefer a husband bringing the same or more—on condition that he be "serious"—say at once, obedient.
By having a sure income of her own of, say, $750, she will just as certainly prefer an obedient young husband earning $10 per week in a government office with short hours and a moderate pension, to a hustler who might double or quadruple her capital. And if she has $1,500 per year she will still more certainly prefer an obedient young husband earning nothing to a wonder of enterprise—who is always at his office!
This explains the immense vogue in France of those professions called "of perfect repose." The phrase refers to repose of mind in that these professions seldom tempt men to risk capital in investments; but repose of body is no stranger to their walks. They are army officers, government functionaries (one French voter in ten is a government functionary), barrister, doctor, engineer and university professor.
Engineers, either of civil or military specialties or of private enterprises, are quoted high, but rather special. Often

Aid to Weight.

A young man who wanted to get on the police force, but was six pounds under weight, applied for advice to a cop who had been on the force several years.
"It is the easiest thing in the world," said the experienced one. "Just before you go in to take the physical examination eat a lot of boiled cabbage and drink all the milk you can. Water used to be the regular thing, but it is not so heavy as milk and the stomach holds less of it. Milk and cabbage are the heaviest foods in the world. You can increase your weight five to ten pounds within an hour."
The candidate followed the advice and passed with two pounds to spare.

Camel's Carrying Capacity.

A camel can easily carry a weight of one thousand pounds on its back, about four times as much as a horse can carry. The camel begins work at the age of 4 and is useful for half a century. The horse, as a rule, is nearly played out at the age of 15.

Investigate and you will find that jealousy sends more people to insane asylums than any other thing. It will even do up drink in making a record.

LINCOLN'S WEAPON.

How He Employed Ridicule for His Client's Benefit.

Wit and ridicule were Lincoln's weapons of offense and defense, and he probably laughed more jury cases out of court than any other man who ever practiced at the bar.
"I once heard Mr. Lincoln defend a man in Bloomington against a charge of passing counterfeit money." Vice President Stevenson told the writer. "There was a pretty clear case against the accused, but when the chief witness for the people took the stand he stated that his name was J. Parker Green, and Lincoln reverted to this the moment he rose to cross-examine. 'Why J. Parker Greene? What did that J. stand for? John? Well, why didn't the witness call himself John P. Green? That was his name, wasn't it? Well, what was the reason he didn't wish to be known by his right name? Did J. Parker Green have anything to conceal, and if not, why did J. Parker Green part his name in that way? And so on. Of course, the whole examination was farcical.' Mr. Stevenson continued, 'but there was something irresistibly funny in the varying tones and inflections of Mr. Lincoln's voice as he rang the changes upon the man's name; and at the recess the very boys in the street took up the slogan and shouted 'J. Parker Green!' all over the town. Moreover, there was something in Lincoln's way of intoning his questions which made me suspicious of the witness, and to this day I have never been able to rid my mind of the absurd impression that there was something not quite right about J. Parker Green. It was all nonsense, of course, but the jury must have been affected as I was, for Green was discredited and the defendant went free."
Avoiding Temptation.
Slopay—Let's go up this side street; I see my tailor coming down the avenue.
Diggs—Why, I never knew you to go out of your way to avoid meeting a creditor before.
Slopay—Yes, but I happen to have money in my pocket this time, and I might be tempted to pay him.
At the Night School.
Teacher (of rhetoric)—What do you suppose the poet means when he speaks of "the stuff that dreams are made of?"
Shaggy Haired Pupil—I guess he means a cut of mince pie at bedtime.

For the Children

To succeed these days you must have plenty of grit, courage, strength. How is it with the children? Are they thin, pale, delicate? Do not forget Ayer's Sarsaparilla. You know it makes the blood pure and rich, and builds up the general health in every way.

The children cannot possibly have good health unless the bowels are in proper condition. A sluggish liver gives a coated tongue, bad breath, constipated bowels. Correct all these by giving small laxative doses of Ayer's Pills. All vegetable, sugar coated.

For the Children

To succeed these days you must have plenty of grit, courage, strength. How is it with the children? Are they thin, pale, delicate? Do not forget Ayer's Sarsaparilla. You know it makes the blood pure and rich, and builds up the general health in every way.

The children cannot possibly have good health unless the bowels are in proper condition. A sluggish liver gives a coated tongue, bad breath, constipated bowels. Correct all these by giving small laxative doses of Ayer's Pills. All vegetable, sugar coated.
