

Arrivals at Madras.

John Brown was in town Monday from the Haystack country.

John Rush, the Lamontia merchant, was a visitor in Madras last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Farrell were in town Monday from their ranch near Youngs.

Frank Loveland was down at Madras the latter part of the week, from the camp of the Madras Oil & Gas Company near Lamontia.

E. S. F. Newcome, a cattleman from the Shaniko country, was in town Monday evening. Mr. Newcome is going to the mountains to spend a few days with M. Maxwell at the latter's sheep camp near Soda Springs.

J. E. Campbell, W. C. Moore and W. F. Sherrad started for the mountains last Saturday, accompanied by their families. They are going after berries and will spend several weeks camped near some of the big huckleberry patches.

W. F. Fields and wife, Mrs. J. E. Wilson and John Mays returned Saturday afternoon from a camping trip in the mountains. They went over the McKenzie road. The party killed only one deer, although they say there is plenty of game in the mountains if they had cared to hunt for it.

A. P. Clark has purchased the large gasoline engine used by J. C. & M. A. Robinson at their pumping plant and moved it up on the plains Friday. It has been mounted on a wagon and will be used for power in operating Mr. Clark's threshing machine. This is the first time a gasoline engine has been used for that purpose in this district.

Wesley Hill has rented the lower rooms of the townsite building, and his daughter and one or two other young ladies from Agency Plains will occupy them this winter and take the 9th and 10th grade work in the Madras school. Houses are in demand in Madras and all available buildings will be occupied by families who desire to reside in Madras to take advantage of the excellent school at this place. A number of other buildings could be rented if they were available.

An old gentleman whose name was not learned passed through Madras last Thursday evening on his way to the upper Deschutes to fish for "red sides." He stated that he had fished in every other trout stream in the United States, and had come 700 miles to fish in the Deschutes. He was an artist, making a specialty of painting members of the finny tribe, and his fishing trip was not for the sport of fishing alone, but in order to get specimens of the Deschutes river trout to reproduce on canvas.

Frost settles in the low flats in this section and does more damage than it does on the higher ground. At Theodore Reiger's place South of Madras, where he has a fine lot of cantaloupes and muskmelons growing, this was especially noticeable last Saturday night. Mr. Reiger thought there would be a heavy frost and covered a majority of his vines, but even those exposed were not damaged by the frost, although in the same neighborhood potato vines and other plants were killed in the lower places.

Philipp, formerly a contractor on Bank road, was in Madras the week looking over this section.

Several days here looking over and surrounding district, and he himself as being very much interested with the outlook for this section, secured transportation. That this will have a railroad at an early date is firmly convinced, although he has nothing more than common sense to base his belief upon. He believes, that the line will be built by the Hill interests, and construction will be started within the present year.

Indian named William Johnson was a hearing before U. S. Commissioner Osborn Monday, on a charge of being into the girls' dormitory at the school on the reservation, with intent, and was bound over to court. Another Indian named Tull was also charged with the same, but had made his escape and could not be arraigned with Johnson. A warrant for his arrest and he was probably apprehended and held in custody until a hearing later. William Johnson, the Indian bound over, will be taken to Portland and confined in jail until trial.

Mrs. A. C. Sanford and family and Mrs. W. H. Hess went over to the reservation yesterday to spend several days camping at the warm springs.

Deputy U. S. Marshal Nicholson of Portland passed through town Monday afternoon on his way from the Warm spring reservation, having in charge William Johnson, an Indian charged with breaking into the girls' dormitory at the Indian school at the agency. The Indian was being taken to Portland to await trial.

Mr. and Mrs. John Malone and their two children were in town Monday on the way to their home at Antelope from a four weeks' camping trip in the mountains. They were camped near Fish Lake, where a number of people from this section have been camped during the summer. Mr. Malone says they had a fine outing, but a cold rain and some snow last week started most of the campers homeward.
