OLD CHIEF GERONIMO DIED HATING WHITES

War Commander of Apaches, After Twenty-one Years Did Not Forgive Pale-Faced Captors.

He reveled in dend before they fell into the hands of Geronimo's Apaches.

Geronimo never fought when he could help it. A woman on a ranch or a mail carrier on his pony carried as good a scalp as a soldier and was much safer to slay. When the soldiers caught up-as they sometimes didthe Indians fought back with every device they knew. When the pursuit was too hot their picked men dropped in their blankets and waited until the soldiers came upon them, and sought to shoot the officers. A Typical Raid. The story of one of Geronimo's raids is practically the story of all, and the biggest of them was in 1881, when Geronimo led 500 warriors on the warpath down as far as Chihuahua. They had many diversions along the road. On Eagle river they found a berder with 3,000 sheep. The herder they threw over a cliff, and as he lay there broken-legged they buried him with stones. They punched the eyes out of the sheep until that grew tiresome. In Gold Gulch a haif dozen capitalists were on their way to examine a prospect. A small detachment of the Indians lay in the tall grass alongside the trall and shot five of the six out of their saddles. The sixth man got away. He had retained his rifle, and they did not follow him.

They crossed the Gila river with a lot of horses, killing freighters as they found them, and swept across the mesa near Shakespeare, where they encountered Judge McComa of Silver City, his wife and their 6-year-old son. They shot the judge, felled his wife with a stone, tortured her to death, and carried off the boy-to what fate nobody ever has been able to make the Apaches tell.

When Geronimo was at the height of his power as an outlaw his face was one of demoniacal ferocity. His fury knew no bounds. His temper was so terrible that he frothed at the mouth when enraged. If a horse did not do. as he wished he killed it, and squaws who displeased him were put to death.

The last death trail in which he was engaged was in 1885, and in that raid he killed 76 white settlers. Gen. Miles conducted the campaign against him and, aided by the late Gen. Lawton, he succeeded in snaring the wily chief in 1886. Geronimo and his fighters were run to earth at the junction of the San Bernardino and Bavispe rivers, near the Mexican border, and surrendered unconditionally. They were sent to Fort Pickens, Fla., and later to Mount Vernon Barracks, in Alabama, and then in 1894 were transferred to Fort Sill. It is said that the various campaigns waged by the United States against this murderous redskin cost the lives of nearly 1,000 soldiers and $5,000,000 in money.

At one time, to curry favor with the President that he might be permitted to return to his native Arizona, Geronimo joined the Dutch Reformed church. But his habits were so bad that he was dropped from the church. and he died without acknowledging the white man's God.

tlers and the horrible torture of hundreds of captured enemies. For the last nineteen years this old chief had been a prisoner of war.

He had never forgiven the white men, and up to the time of his death he never spoke of the whites as "brothers" except at times when the wily old redskin covered his hatred to pray for some favor. He had made many attempts to get permission to go back to Arizona, where he said he desired to

Early in 1908 Geronimo made a trip to Washington with a number of his followers in an effort to interest President Roosevelt in his case. The old Indian was unsuccessful, however, and to the last Geronimo was full of bitter hatred for the white man. At the time of his death Geronimo was 86 years old. One daughter, Lola, who lives in Oklahoma, survives the old warrior. From the early '60s until Gen. Lawton, then serving under Gen. Miles, rounded him up in 1886, Geronimo was a living terror to the settlers of Arizona, New Mexico and Sonora, Mexico, Time after time in those days he swept down upon lonely ranches with a band of well-horsed, well-armed savages, murdering and burning, then with the cunning of a snake wriggled back into the mountains, where the little companies of cavalry found it impossible to snare him.

Preferred Death to Capture.

The country first began to hear of Geronimo 50 years ago, when he was comparatively a young man. In those days Cochise was war chief of the Chiricahua Apaches, an old man of bestial cruelty. Geronimo himself was the son of Mangus Colorado, or Chale-row, who as war chief of the Warm Spring Chiricahuas made life a burden to the settlers of Arizona and New Mexico. Cochise died in 1875 after a career of rapine and plunder that couldn't be matched except by the record Geronimo made later. Natchez succeeded Cochise and Geronimo very shortly succeeded Natchez.

As to how many lives Geronimo ended within the next 10 years there is no record. His favorite amusement was to send in assurances of peace to the soldiers, retire for a few months to the mountains, and then when the settlers believed they were in most security to swoop down on them, scalping every man, woman and child who hadn't had time to flee, and there was seldom much warning before Geronimo's raids. Endless stories have been told of the almost unimaginable cruelty Geronimo displayed toward the few prisoners he ever troubled himself to take. More than once ranchers who knew they were doomed to capture or death saw to it that their women were HIS UMBRELLA.

It Was the Cause of Airing Family Secrets in Public.

A young man was riding in an omnibus. He took the corner seat and held in his hand an umbrella which had been given him as a birthday present. On the seat facing him was a lady with a precoclous boy, evidently about five years old.

The youngster regarded the young man with attention for a few moments, and then his eyes wandered to the umbrella. He gazed at it in silence for a second; then he wriggled in his seat, clapped his hands and shouted :

"Oh, mamma, don't that look like papa's umbrella?"

"Hush, hush, my child !" said the mother, patting the prodigy on the head.

"Papa was looking for his umbrella this morning, mamma," continued the child wonder.

"Yes, yes, but he found it," said the mother hurriedly, as the conversation was becoming of interest to the occupants of the seats.

"Why, mamma," continued the youngster, "you know he didn't. You told him that he didn't know enough to keep an umbrella. Why, mamma"-At this stage the small boy was car-
