HOW WAGNER BEGAN HIS BASEBALL CAREER.

HANS WAGNER.

When Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pittsburg club, sends out his contracts to his ball players he mails one to Hans Wagner that is free from ink except that placed on the paper by the printer. He doesn't put in the amount for which Honus is to play, leaving that to the "Big Dutchman." There's nothing surprising about that, for Hans is worth whatever he thinks is right. But when he signed his first contract, a few months after he won his nickname of "Big Dutchman," he signed up for $35 a month.

A former player and manager declares that Hans Wagner had no thought of becoming anything but pitcher until 1895, when he became a member of the Steubenville club in the old Central Association. At that time Al Wagner, Claude Ritchey and Frank Bowerman were on the team. During a slump the manager sent out a call for a pitcher and Al asked that his brother Hans be given a chance. Well, that afternoon he had his tryout and lasted two innings. He had nothing but a straight ball that was so swift it went over the fence if hit or through the catcher if it wasn't. Of course, he didn't make good, but the manager was so short-handed he had to keep him around to play in the field, letting him eat and sleep with his brother. Then Hans took a shine to the job of shortstop and began to practice at it. Early in the morning and after the games he would get the kids to bat to him. Finding that he could not start quick enough, he dug holes in the field like sprinters do, but he was chased for spilling the diamond and had to practice when and where he could.

Finally he became fairly proficient. He could field all right, but was as awkward as a hog on ice. He picked up in batting and soon attracted the attention of rival clubs, but had made such an unfavorable impression with the manager that he was given to the Paterson club for nothing. There he signed a formal contract to play for $35 a month, his first regular salary as a player. There he made good with a vengeance, and the following spring was sold to Louisville for $2,500. He remained with the Colonels until the shift that took him to Pittsburg was made. And there he'll stay just as long as Barney Dreyfuss has money enough to cover the figures that Hans writes in the contract.

A "COMMON SENSE" AIRSHIP.
New Machine Combines the Gas Bag and Aeroplane Principles.
There are in the world, it is estimated, something like 1,000 different types of flying machines, the great majority of which will never fly. About 90 per cent. of the machines are the heavier-than-air variety. Of all the gas-bag types the German dirigible of Count Zeppelin has proved the most successful, while the machine of the American Wright brothers leads the long list of aeroplanes; at any rate, its performances are more familiar to the general public.

Working away quietly upon his plans for the last six years, avoiding rather than seeking notoriety, a Philadelphia inventor has been perfecting a flying machine with original and, what he and his friends firmly believe, most promising features. In a few weeks he will have a model ready for trial.

The machine combines both the gas-bag and aeroplane principles. To the lay mind it seems to promise more nearly absolute safety than any other, while simplicity of construction joins with facility of operation in making it what the inventor has called it, a "common-sense" flying machine. Being purely a Philadelphia product, its success will bring additional laurels to the city of Father Penn. R. M. Robinson, a civil engineer, surveyor and inventor, is the father of the "common-sense" flying machine.—Philadelphia North American.

Killed by Hatstones.
A terrific hailstorm ravaged northern Roumania recently. The hailstones in some places were as large as a man's fist, and many peasants and hundreds of cattle were killed by them. The hail in places lay three feet deep. A torrent of rain water two feet deep tore through the streets of a village. Three children were drowned, and the paving was dislodged as though by an earthquake. The deaths caused by lightning and hail number about forty.

Hopelessly Wrong.
"Heckling" is often an entertaining, although sometimes a tiresome incident of English meetings. The experienced public speaker is usually able to turn the laugh on the interrupter, but in the case reported by a writer in Tit-Bits the man in the audience was victorious to the last.

A political speaker was attacking the Government with more venom than reason. A man at the back of the hall at last cried out, "You're wrong, sir!"

A little nettled, the orator continued without heeding. Presently, in answer to another strong assertion, came again, "You're wrong, sir!"

The speaker looked angry, but continued on the war-path.

"You're wrong, sir!" again rang out.

Angrily addressing the persistent interrupter, the orator cried, "Look here, I could tell this man something about the Government which would make his hair stand on end!"

"You're wrong again, sir!" came from the critic, as he stood up and removed his hat. His head was as bald as a billiard ball.

Dog's Broken Heart.
A remarkable story of a dog's grief at the death of another dog comes from Woodham Mortimer, a village near Chelmsford, Eng. A fox terrier owned by John Rainsford died, and was buried in the garden. The burial was witnessed by a fine collie, and great difficulty was afterwards experienced in keeping it from the spot. After the death of the terrier the collie refused food, and never barked. It was obviously grief-stricken, and soon after died on the grave of its friend.

Not Interested.
"Have you heard the latest news?" inquired Mrs. Blizzard.
"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "It's very shocking, isn't it?"
"You know the people—"
"No. I haven't the slightest idea as to the identity of the people. Scandals are like humorous anecdotes about celebrities—the same old stories with different names introduced."—Washington Star.

Clergymen on Strike.
The Protestant clergyman at the provincial prison at Liegnitz, in Germany has struck, the magistracy having refused to raise his salary from $100 to $150. Other Protestant clergymen in the town fully approve of his action and side with him. The Liegnitz Protestant churches consequently are closed for the present.

Legal Information

In the case of the American Express Co. vs. Mullins, 29 Supreme Court Register, 381, it appeared that Mullins had delivered certain liquor to the express company in the State of Kentucky for transportation and delivery in Kansas in violation of the laws of the latter State. On arrival of the goods at destination, they were seized by a sheriff under a warrant issued by a District Court in Kansas and notice given to show cause why they should not be forfeited and destroyed. The express company notified the shipper of the proceedings taken, and he promised to defend, but apparently did not do so, and the Kansas authorities destroyed the liquor. The present action was then instituted against the express company to recover for the loss of the goods, on the theory that it was its duty to defend the search and seizure proceedings, and that they were without warrant of law and void. The United States Supreme Court held that the shipper having received notice of the proceedings and having promised to defend, the express company was thereby relieved from this duty. As against the contention that the Kansas judgment was wrong and in conflict with a prior decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, it was held to be conclusive and unimpeachable on the theory of being based upon a mistake of law.

In an interesting opinion handed down by the Supreme Court of South Dakota in Danforth v. Egan, 119 Northwestern Reporter, 1021, the right of a disbarred attorney to take office as State's Attorney is considered. Defendant Egan received a majority of the votes cast for State's Attorney in his county, and was given a certificate of election. He had formerly been a licensed attorney in the State, but was disbarred from practicing therein shortly before his election. It was practically admitted that the judgment of disbarment would prevent his appearance in the courts of record in the State, but it was claimed that this duty might be performed by a deputy. The court held, however, that defendant could not be allowed to dictate and oversee this important part of the work of his office while prohibited from performing it in person. It was also alleged that under the Constitution the only qualification imposed was that the State's Attorney should be "learned in the law," and consequently need not be an attorney at all. The court says that the use of the word "attorney," definitely indicates that the office should only be filled by one regularly admitted to practice in the courts, and that the phrase "learned in the law" includes an acquaintance with rules of conduct commonly known as "legal ethics"; that, it having been judicially determined that appellant had disobeyed these rules, it would be conclusively presumed that his violation had been through ignorance; and that, therefore, the judgment of disbarment practically decided that defendant was certainly not learned in that branch of the law.

WHERE WORMS EXCEL MAN.
Former Can Live and Grow New Parts When Cut Into Pieces.
The power of regeneration, that is, the ability to replace mutilated parts or organs by natural growth, is marked in some of the lower animals. Man has it to a very slight degree; he can grow a new section of skin, but not a new eye or a new finger. In some species of worms the power extends even to the repeated ability to grow a new head, a writer in the New York Herald says.

In some experiments on these worms it was found that if one or more segments were cut from the forward part of the creature a head with its neighboring segments grew on at once, while if the segments were removed from the rear a new tail grew on. If head and tail were cut off at the same time each grew on in its proper place. If the worm were divided into several pieces each shortly became a new worm, heads and tails appearing where they were needed. Even a single segment is thus able to constitute an entire creature.

No matter how many times the head and tail are thus removed successively, they always grow on again. In a closely related worm on which similar experiments were made the regenerative power did not extend quite so far. When head and tail were removed at once the head was replaced very imperfectly. In all cases, even with the first species, when regeneration was usually perfect, monstrosities occasionally appeared as a result of the process. Thus, a forked tail sometimes grew on instead of a straight one, and so on. It would be interesting to see whether any of these peculiarities are transmissible by heredity.

THE CRY FOR CREAM

is constantly increasing. The big creamery companies are constantly on the lookout and are offering good prices. A great many dairymen are buying more cows instead of trying to get all the profits possible out of those they now have. They seem to think about all that they can do is to run the milk through a cream separator, never stopping to consider whether the cream separator is doing its duty as it should. If its an old-fashioned, out-of-date or cheap machine it can't get all the butterfat—it wasn't intended to. Your dairy profits can be increased from 5 to 25 per cent by the use of

A NEW IOWA CREAM SEPARATOR

The Separator that has won recognition by the three last exhibitions, St. Louis, Portland and Jamestown, and has the endorsement of all the leading dairy experts. Its use actually means the saving of a great amount of cream, and also means that your cream makes better butter and never has that separator taste peculiar to cream skimmed by other machines. This is because the Iowa is so easily cleaned and never becomes choked up with film and dirt. Among its many advantages are these—white-low supply can, enclosed gearing; ease of operation; adjustable crank; neat appearance; interchangeable parts; etc. IT IS POSITIVELY THE CLOSEST SKIMMER ON THE MARKET.
