THE NEW SAN FRANCISCO.

From Every Point of View it in Far

Ahead of the Old City.

The new San Francisco is better than the old, writes Edgar French in a recent number of The World's Work. Fireproof construction of concrete and steel prevails in the business district New types of architecture have taken the places of old-fashioned structures. Even Chinatown has felt the new impulse and is built better—less picturesque, it may be, but safer. The old esque, it may be, but safer. The old landmarks are gone, but few continue to mourn them. A tradition is dead but better traditions are building.

This is especially true in public morals and taste. The old San Fran cisco clung to a pride on a freedom of life often close to license. Dance halls rel while eating dinner, madam. and restaurants throve on a line of have good and plenty to say to you tradition running back to the days of after a while. gold, when "everything went." Pub lie gambling was a part of the same superstition.

Here has been a great change. The fire brought the people face to face with every problem of life, and the values of things were readjusted by a new standard. The race tracks are gone by a State law modeled after New York's, and the picturesque ret inne of the game has gone with it Even the nickel-in-the-slot gambling machines, that have traditionally parted the fool from his money, are of the past. And an agent of a national or ganization of distillers and brewers only recently was warning the saloon men that probibition stares them squarely in the face if they do not re

These things connote a last stage in evolution that is typical of all Callfornia. The frontier is gone. The west is like the east in every essential The problems of San Francisco are the problems of Boston, and the same kind of people are working out their sciution.
