"We must admit," he said, "the occupation of the farmer is among one or two of the most independent occupations that go to make this country great-and a state which is great because of it is entitled to recognition as typifying Americanism in the highest degree.

"We have arrived at a time in the development of this country and the world when old methods of agriculture must be discarded, if we would keep up with the procession. Land is becoming too valuable to treat it in the old wasteful way. I am glad to note Mississippi has one of the best agriculture institutions in the country.

"Here you have been able to restrain that tendency of your young men to come into cities and live in tenements, in order that they may be where the wheels go round. If I were advising a young man as to his future profession I should say to him there probably is greater opportunity for real reward in the profession of agriculture than in any other."
