Harvey W. Scott,
Great Editor, Dead

Harvey W. Scott, for 40 years editor of the Oregonian, died last Sunday evening at John Hopkins hospital in Baltimore, Maryland, 32 hours after a surgical operation for prostatectomy.

With him were his wife and one of his sons, Leslie Scott, who had accompanied him on his trip for surgical relief. In Portland Mr. Scott leaves two sons, John H. and Ambrose B., and one daughter, Miss Judith.

Mr. Scott began failing nearly three months ago from an attack of sciatica. Early in June he went to Hot Lake, Eastern Oregon, but the baths there greatly debilitated him. At last convinced that only surgery could relieve him, he started for John Hopkins Hospital, from Portland, one week ago last Thursday morning.

The operation was pronounced entirely successful and the surgeons and physicians were confident of his recovery up to Sunday morning, when an unexpected weakness of the heart ensued which the physicians were powerless to cope with.

The remains will be brought from Baltimore to Portland for burial in Riverview Cemetery. The body is due to arrive there Friday night or Saturday. Sunday a Masonic funeral service will be held in Portland, wherein the Masonic bodies of that city will lay the body at rest. There is the possibility of the Kadosh funeral ceremonies occurring Saturday night, if the remains reach the city in time, this being the most impressive Scottish Rite service that is ever held over the dead.

FARMER IMPROVES UPON AUTOMOBILES

J. I. Jones, a farmer living near Powell Buttes, has perfected an invention whereby power may be applied to all four wheels of an automobile instead of to the two rear wheels as at present. Those who have seen the invention state that it not only works well, greatly increasing the motive power obtainable from the engine, but that it permits the application of an improved steering gear. Mr. Jones has applied for a patent, and has received favorable advices from the Patent Office concerning his application.

PAT KENNEDY LOSES HIS LIFE IN ALASKA

Pat Kennedy, of the railroad contracting firm of Kennedy & Frazer, who have the contract for the first 10 miles of Oregon Trunk grading south of Madras, lost his life July 27th in Alaska, when a stage in which he was riding upset in the river. Mr. Kennedy was struck by the plunging horses and was either killed outright or drowned. He left here about the middle of July to go to Alaska to look after business interests. He was one of the most successful and widely known railroad builders in the country.

SPECIMENS COMING IN VERY SLOWLY

Some specimen grains for exhibits have been received by Ora VanTassel for the Great Northern show car, but not nearly as many farmers have responded to the request to bring in samples of their products as ought to. As a matter of fact the collection is meagre up to date. It would seem that the only way a satisfactory exhibit can be gathered will be for some one to make it his special business to go out and secure these specimens.
