Engineer Lyman Griswold of the Oregon Trunk Railway, left today on his trip to Portland.

E. Catching, who has been in the city, returned to her home at Pendleton.

Shattuck, superintendent of the Light & Water Co., and Ed were here from the county seat of the week.

V. H. Snook returned home last night with Mrs. Snook and the children from the seashore at Long Beach, and they expect to remain there longer.

Mrs. J. H. Horney arrived yesterday from the East, having been called by the dangerous illness of her daughter, Miss Bertha. Miss Horney is expected to be better.

J. Strasser was the winner of the prize given away by the Central Mercantile Company Wednesday afternoon. The clock stopped at 12:00 and Mrs. Strasser's card called for the prize.

Austin, superintendent of the Oregon Trunk well drilling operations, returned to Madras Wednesday, accompanied by Mrs. Austin. He got back in the city with the good news that water had been struck by the drillers.

C. H. Boyd who has been in the city on his summer vacation learning the business of the Madras Bank, left Tuesday on his return to St. Johns, where he is superintendent of the public schools.

Perceval and family and Mr. and Mrs. Mayes are spending a vacation in the vicinity of the new town of Madras on the Oregon Trunk survey in Klamath county, and at the same time.

D. Brown came up from Madras Monday to confer with the committee of the new First Church. Rev. Brown is a fine preacher. He built the new church at Madras for Rev. Bailey—Prineville.

Putz is home from California, his trip to that state in quest of a new location requiring as much time as he could spare. H. Dietzel is also back in the city and they are getting the Flouring Mills in readiness to start grinding right away.

Sh, an Italian laborer at Aldon's on the Deschutes Railway in Portland, was struck by the dump car he was working on the works last Wednesday morning and was knocked down. His left shoulder was dislocated. Dr. Howard was called to attend the sufferer.

Fairchild has lately made a photograph of Madras measuring 21 inches. It being the first of this character, and as this is the first year of incorporated Madras, it is a valuable picture to keep and to show with the views he intends to make next year from the same viewpoint.

Donar, manager of the Pioneer Cigar Company, and George Storkmann, manager of the Prineville Cigar Factory, returned Monday from Prineville. Mr. Storkmann was inspecting the work that has been done in installing the new machinery at Madras, while Mr. Storkmann was looking up his local patrons on the coast.

Brandon, chief engineer of the Oregon Trunk Railway and Mr. Boss, general superintendent for Twoby Bros. were in the city last week looking after matters in connection with the railroad construction. The principal object on this trip was the inspection of the foundations of the preliminary work that has been done on the big steel viaduct on which the man trains are to cross Trout Creek. These gentlemen went as far as Culver junction on their trip of inspection.

John Brown of Chehalis, Wash., returned to Madras Wednesday and will be the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Horney on Agency Plains, where her daughter, Miss Ulla Brown, has been a resident for the past two months. Mrs. Brown conducts a photo studio at Chehalis and brought a part of her photographic apparatus with her. Mrs. Brown is interested in this country and has a homestead on Agency Plains several years ago. This land is owned by W. H. Wierman, a railroader.

TS—Drs. Clark and Elliott in Madras only through the month of September.

BRIEF ITEMS OF NEWS.

"HOME RULE."

The phrase "home rule" is being brought into disrepute by organizations formed ostensibly to secure home rule for cities, but in reality to fight prohibition or any other reform movement that strikes at the "dealers in dissipation." Says Arthur Burrage Farwell, president of the Chicago Law and Order League: "The liquor, gambling, and house of ill-fame interests would prefer home rule for the large cities." And, illustrating the right of the state to control the city, Mr. Farwell asks: "Suppose a man is murdered in the illegal Sunday saloon, open in violation of the law and of the oath of the executive officer of a city, and suppose that man comes from some quiet home on the farm out on the prairie; isn't the family of that man interested in the enforcement of law in a city where the Sunday saloon is allowed to be open in violation of law?"

Good men are misled by this clamor for city home rule. The phrase catches the imagination of naturalized citizens especially. As always, the interests of the liquor traffic and its kind have seized upon a good name as a cloak for their real purpose, and the name, like everything else touched by these interests, will be debased. Beware of "home rule" societies.

If, as some people say, more liquor is sold where there are no saloons than where there are saloons, would brewers, distillers and wholesale dealers, who own about three-fourths of all saloons, pay large sums of money to influence the press to publish and distribute literature and in other ways to obtain licenses, all to lessen the amount of their sales?

Liquor men say they are opposed to prohibition because it does not prohibit. That is, they insist, the law will not be obeyed. Who will break it? Not temperance people; not Christian people; not law-abiding people. Wherever it is broken it will be because some liquor dealers sell contrary to law. Because they are anarchists and criminals in heart and life, they demand that the law shall be such as suits them. It is better to make good laws and then enforce them against criminals and anarchists, and this is our policy today.
