 The fame of Tilman Reuter as a dry farmer is well known in Crook county, where he has taken sweepstakes at the First Central Oregon Agricultural Fair for two consecutive seasons for the best individual farmer's exhibit, besides capturing many prizes for different varieties of agricultural products. Of the 23 different varieties of grains, grasses and vegetables that Mr. Reuter had on exhibition at the Dry Farming Congress, mention of which was made in a former issue of the Pioneer, he received prizes on 18 of them. He has already prepared a separate exhibit of farm products for the Crook County Fair which will be on display at Prineville when the fair convenes October 18, continuing over the 22.

A dispatch from Spokane makes the following mention of Tilman Reuter's prize-winnings at the Dry Farming Congress:

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 5.—Tilman Reuter, of Madras, Crook county, Oregon, was awarded the sweepstakes in classes for his exhibit of grain and vegetables at the Fifth Dry Farming Congress exhibition here. Reuter has also taken the first prize for the best collective individual exhibit from all dry farming states, the first prize on red and white onions, the first prize for sheaf display, first in showing of alfalfa at different cuttings, and first in individual display.

The naming of Colorado Springs as the meeting place for the next Dry Farming Congress, with a short sketch of the proceedings, is given in the subjoined dispatch:

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 6.—After adopting the report of the executive committee, naming Colorado Springs as the place for the next convention, the Dry Farming Congress finally adjourned at 5:30 this evening. Tonight the delegates are being entertained at a banquet.

Resolutions were adopted by the congress as follows:

Urging the distribution of Dry Farming Congress memberships among worthy farmers by commercial bodies in dry farming districts.

Encouraging the planting of trees by dry farmers and asking the co-operation of State and Federal Government bureaus and experiment stations.

Urging the members to encourage the interest of boys and girls of farmers in agricultural problems, advising the formation of competitive children's farming and gardening corps.

Forming a permanent committee on agricultural education to consult with a committee of the National Educational Association in the schools of the land, the committee to be formed of one member from each state or province.

Asking larger appropriations by both state and Federal Governments for agricultural experiment stations, dry farming experiment stations and the extension of Federal appropriations to the state sub-stations.

Demanding that Congress at once provide for the survey of unsurveyed lands in the northwest, so as to make them available for settlement.

Asking that the bulletins of the experiment stations and of the Department of Agriculture be placed in the hands of Dry Farming Congress members and asking further co-operation between state and Federal experiment stations.

COUNTY TEACHERS' INSTITUTE OCT. 19

The annual teachers' institute for Crook county will be held at the Crook County High School building in Prineville by Superintendent Ford, beginning Wednesday, October 19, and continuing three days. This should be, and no doubt will be the best institute yet held in the county. The school law makes it compulsory for every teacher in the county to attend.

No school can be held legally during those three days and as there are more instructors than ever before, the banner institute is looked forward to by the teachers in general.

The institute offers a strong program on which appear the following names: P. L. Campbell, president of the University of Oregon; Fletcher Holman, president of Willamette University.

Friday will be the big day for the school people at the fair. The school parade will start at 9:30 and the track meet will commence an hour later. At 2 o'clock the school children of Crook county will be addressed by President P. S. Campbell of the University of Oregon. School children will be admitted free to the grounds on school day.

DAVID LINDSAY IS FOUND DEAD

David Lindsay, a well known resident of the Hay Creek vicinity, was found lying on the ground dead, about five miles east of Madras last Friday morning between eight and nine o'clock, by A. C. Philpott, his team standing near tied to a telegraph pole. One of the Pierson boys immediately came to town and notified Justice Jackson, who, being unable to notify any of the authorities at Prineville, went out to the location of Lindsay's body and impaneled a jury consisting of John McTaggart, Walter Sayre, William Hess G. N. Pillette, A. Pierson and S. F. Robertson, whose verdict was that Mr. Lindsay had died from natural causes or from a fall from his wagon.

Lindsay had been subject to heart failure, and circumstances tend to show that that was the cause of his death. Some of his friends have remarked that his end would probably come in this manner.

David Lindsay was a member of the I. O. O. F. at Antelope, and the Odd Fellows' lodge at this place took charge of the remains, and held the funeral services of the Order over the body, Rev. J. H. Barkley, assisting; interment being made in the Madras cemetery.

Mr. Lindsay was possessed of considerable property near Haycreek, where he has been a resident for several years. He is not known to have any relatives in this country, and is thought to be a native of Scotland.

The case of the State of Oregon against Dan Karough, who is being held in the county jail for the murder of his foreman in the railroad construction camp near Madras at midnight on July 16, is the only case to date where a man's life is at stake. In this case there is much circumstantial evidence, and some direct evidence, but as most of the witnesses are Karough's own countrymen it is a question as to what will be brought out at the trial.

The case of the State of Oregon against C. Sam Smith is on the docket, and will be taken up at this time. This case is referred back to the district court for a rehearing, from the supreme court of the state on technicalities.
