

Deschutes County Not Needed

and very certainly it is not desired by the remainder of Crook county. If it were left to a vote of the people of the proposed new county the project would be defeated 3 to 1, perhaps 5 to 1.

Of the 10,163 names on the initiative petition for Deschutes county, only 217 were obtained in Crook county.

The people of Prineville, the county seat of Crook county; of Bend, the second town in the county, and Madras, the third town, are on record in opposition to this county division scheme. Redmond, the proposed new county seat, has been incorporated since this new county scheme was launched. It is a growing town, but the rest of the county does not feel like contributing so heavily to its real estate boom.

Madras is included within the limits of the proposed new county. Laidlaw and Sisters are other towns included. All are flatly against this movement. A great many of the farmers are also opposed to it.

This is no time to divide Crook county. The approaching railroads have produced a somewhat feverish activity in this country. Development is sure to be rapid and candor compels the statement that lines are not yet firmly established and will not be until transportation shall become an accomplished fact and industry and commerce are shaped to it. That Redmond is upon two projected railways, both of which are under rush construction, is true, and it is also true of Madras, Bend, La-Pine, Crescent and even of the fake towns of Hillman and Opal City, to say nothing of the 72 miles of right of way not yet platted. Even in Crook county we do not regard everything as of metropolitan or county seat dimensions simply because it is upon the railroad right of way. The railroads have to build somewhere on the earth.

The boundaries of the proposed new county are arbitrarily run and utterly without regard to the convenience of the people. All the southwestern part of Crook county would have to go through Deschutes county to get to their own county seat. The most logical of boundary lines—natural features—are totally ignored. The lines go up to the same township in which Bend is situated and almost as near as to Prineville. And, after all, for what? For a real estate boom that is only partially indorsed in its own home.

Colonist Traffic Is Record Breaking

Transcontinental railroads are handling a record-breaking rush of colonists, both the Hill and the Harriman lines being taxed to the capacity of their equipment to handle the crowds. This movement is unusual at a time when the East and Middle West are complaining of dull times. It would seem to confirm the general belief that Oregon, even in periods of temporary dullness, is so much better off than other parts of the country that it is a most attractive place to live. The present record movement is the result of many years of careful exploitation on the part of the railroads and the commercial organizations of the state. This advertising by newspapers, maps, pamphlets and books has been supplemented by an even more powerful advertising force—the testimony of the man who has given the state a trial, says the Oregonian.

There are thousands of these men and women scattered throughout the state. Their experience has proved so satisfactory that they have been the means of bringing many others who might not have come had they been dependent on other sources for their knowledge of the state and its opportunities. There is so much to attract new settlers to this region, without in the least overdrawn the picture, that disappointment is rare among the newcomers. This fall colonist movement is the heaviest ever known, but it will be eclipsed by the rush that will come in the Spring.

Next year there will be opened up for settlement the Great Central Oregon region, a territory which will support a greater population than can find homes in the Willamette Valley. New rail lines will also have opened up the great undeveloped country lying between the Columbia River and the ocean. It will be many years before Oregon will be unable to offer the strongest kind of inducements to new settlers, and as the real merits of the country are better understood this colonist rush will not be limited to Spring and Fall periods, but will be in evidence throughout the year.

By hard work and strict economy one may save a few hundred dollars in a lifetime, but fortunes are the result of wise investments.

OFFERS OF INVESTMENTS

Madras Is One of the Best on the Pacific Coast Today

It is not a paper made town, nor one of those "Dollar down and dollar a month" propositions. It's a real, solid, genuine opportunity to make money on a reasonable small expenditure.

MADRAS is already a town of importance. The railroads recognize it and are looking to Madras as one of their heaviest shipping points. They advertise Madras together with Central Oregon in the Eastern press. The railroads are helping to make Madras a Big City.

WATCH MADRAS GROW. Only 15 weeks until the two railroads reach Madras, then things will happen and happen quick. Prices will go high, Madras will be crowded. MADRAS WILL BOOM. Purchase a lot in Madras and realize on a wise investment. More money can be made in Madras in the next six months than elsewhere in six years. Madras Original Townsite and Railroad Addition are right in the heart of the business center where values are bound to increase rapidly. Keep in touch with what the mayor and City Council are doing for City Improvements.
