

The Best Field For Colonization

Says President Louis W. Hill, of the Great Northern: "Oregon presents a better field for colonization than any other state today, not alone because of the lack of development of a large portion of it, but also because of the fact that almost any variety of climate that may be found from Maine to Mason and Dixon's line, or between the Atlantic coast and the Mississippi River, may be found in Oregon." Mr. Hill and the great financial interests he represents are backing their judgment regarding this state by investing more millions in this field than have ever been spent here in a similar period. The North Bank Road, across the Columbia River, was built almost exclusively for the purpose of developing the great trade of the Willamette Valley, Central Oregon and the coast regions of the state. The construction of that road was followed by the absorption of the Astoria & Columbia Railroad, the Oregon Electric and United Railways systems and the building of a road into the long-neglected Central Oregon country and to the Pacific Coast by way of Tillamook and Nehalem. The possibilities of the region now being invaded by the Hill lines are so great, however, that it is hardly possible that the present aversion to railroad investments will extend far enough to retard construction of the necessary feeders in Oregon and Washington for a period of great length. In view of the unsettled financial condition in the East and the hostile sentiment that is preventing investment in railroad securities, it is somewhat surprising that the work on both the Hill and the Harriman systems in this state is progressing as rapidly as it is. The combined mileage of new track which will be laid by these lines in 1910 will exceed that of any previous year of railroad building in the history of the state. In order to get this new territory which is being opened up into traffic-producing condition the railroads are making strenuous efforts to induce immigrants to come to Oregon. Publicity work now carried on in the East is the most effective that has ever been undertaken.

CATALOGUE BUYING.

Many Disappointments Resulting From Sending Money Away.

There are limits to the possibilities of making purchases from no better guide than a catalogue picture, and many must be the disappointments resulting from it. Suppose that the trusting woman's eye is taken with the print of a gown described by the optimistic recorder of such things as Alice blue. It sounds safe. Blue has always been her color, and she fills out the blank. Then comes the business of choosing the hat that is to go with it and supplement its work of electrifying the citizens of the hamlet in which she lives. And of course there is a hat that just suits, and the text promises that it will be furnished in any one of six colors, one of them being providentially Alice blue. Gloves, veil and parasol, all of them are supplied by the merchant in the same lovely shade, and it looks as if a costume of surpassing beauty and completeness were about to be acquired. Later it arrives, all its several parts intact and "just as advertised." But, oh, shades of Alice, can it be that the daughter of a president lent the sanction of her name to this variety of blues—blues that represent almost the whole gamut of tints and in combination are nothing short of distressing?—New York Herald.

Courage.

Oh, fear not in a world like this
And thou shalt know ere long—
Know how sublime a thing it is
To suffer and be strong!

And thou, too, whose'er thou art,
That readest this brief psalm,
As one by one thy hopes depart
Be resolute and calm.

—Longfellow.
