DUST LAYING.

Oil Used by Canadian Town to Sprinkle Streets.

Consul Augustus G. Seyfert of Owen Sound, Ont., says that "the sandy lake shore soil upon which Owen Sound is located results in very dusty streets. No matter how much rain fails or how much water is sprinkled on the streets in an hour thereafter the dust becomes a nuisance and a menace to health. "The objection at first was that the odor from the crude oil was offensive. but in a day or two this disappeared, and the change for the better to dust less streets was recognized by all. The first application of oil lasted six weeks, and the second application was put on the other day, and what were some of the dustlest streets are now perfectly dustless.

"The town officials state that it will be an annual saving of $2,000 over the old water system and at the same time give much better results."

SELLING EARLY POTATOES.

Marketing Through Shipping Associa

tions Explained by Government. The perishable nature of the linmature potato renders it necessary to place it upon the market in such quantitles only as will admit of immediate consumption. Producers in regions where the growing of early potatoes Si has been extensively developed appreciate this and have provided for this condition by organizing shippers' associations through which the crop is graded, often trademarked, and distributed chiefly in carload lots. The officers of the association, being in constant telegraphic communication with the various markets, are thus informed regarding the most satisfactory destination for every consignment which may be necessary. It is the purpose of these associations, however, to conduct their business in such a way that the product can be sold f. o. b. shipping point instead of by consignment, and the best organized associations are usually able to do this.

The great advantage of such a system of selling is that it enables the brokers in a small city or town to buy direct from the producer instead of through another city broker. It en ables the consumer to obtain fresh products, as they are shipped direct from the point of production to the place of consumption. The plan carries other benefits which are of great moment to the producer. He is enabled to sell in carload lots at shipping point, thus saving to himself the cost of transportation, which ranges from 7 to 15 per cent of the gross selling price. The exchange secures a much wider distribution of the crop, with the result that overstocked markets are much less likely than under the consignment system. Transportation companies provide better service, and claims are change than in the case of individuals. This plan enables the producer to be his own salesman. It transfers the distributing point from the city to the field, where it should be. It brings the market to the field instead of the Department of the Interior, United product to the market. The exchange becomes the farmer's commission house, and it is much easier to keep informed regarding the transactions of a home association than of a foreign concern. -United States Department of Agriculture Bulletin.
