"ALFALFA PALACE" AT NORTHWEST LAND SHOW

Demonstrators Will Show Its Value as a Stock Food and Its Successful Growth in the North

How the wonderful alfalfa plant has been brought to America, acclimated in zones further north than it has ever known before, together with graphic demonstrations as to its value as a food for stock, will be shown at the Northwestern land show in December, in a great exhibit to be known as the "Alfalfa Palace."

This exhibit will be installed to show samples of alfalfa seed and samples of the hay, various methods of curing, the mixing of it with corn and other grains. Finally, its effect when used with grain to make a balanced ration for livestock.

The Northwestern railway lines have arranged to install this exhibit and it will be made especially interesting to the Northern states. Some states have imagined that the legume plant known as alfalfa would not be adapted to this climate, but the plant breeders at the experiment stations have stretched the alfalfa belt northward and one of the features of the show in St. Paul next December will be to show the success with which alfalfa is produced in the North.

DRINKING CUP LAW ANGERS MISSOURIAN

Passenger Argues With Train Crew and Finally Calls in Services of an Attorney

When John Stead of Ainslee, Mo., discovered that the Oregon Trunk railway had failed in what he thought was its duty to provide drinking cups for its passengers on the Deschutes Valley train last week, John "went up in the air" like an aeroplane seeking an altitude record.

"What kind of a dash blank road is this, anyway," inquired the man from Missouri. The brakeman tried to explain that the Oregon legislature had seen fit to pass a law prohibiting the use of public drinking cups in public places and on common carriers.

Not until the thirsty passenger took up the subject with the conductor, called in the services of lawyer who happened to be on the train, and finally was persuaded to purchase a paper cup from the train news agent, was his ire subsided.

Lewis H. Irving and A. W. Culp returned Wednesday night from a two day's fishing trip on the Deschutes with 116 fine trout, the largest weighing nearly three pounds. They fished from South Junction to Mecca on the river, a distance of about five miles.

As usually treated, a sprained ankle will disable a man for three or four weeks, but by applying Chamberlain's Liniment freely as soon as the injury is received, and observing the directions with each bottle, a cure can be effected in from two to four days. For sale by M. E. Snook.
