A Modern Girl.
She wears the most outrageous hats. Their loudness is alarming. They blind your eyes, and maybe that's the reason why they're charming. Her hobbies in the latest style. So smart 'twould set some crazy. But all the men admire while they murmur, "She's a daisy!"

She trips along with pliant grace. "Neath women's eyes judicial. A dash of color in her face— It may be artificial— While men gaze with admiring eye, Her beauty overrating. And ask themselves the reason why She is so fascinating. —Somerville Journal.

It Acted as a Tonic.
The grouch was very ill. The doctor inspected him gravely. The grouch looked on with alarm.

"Now, see here, doc," he growled, "I want to know just what you're going to charge me for all this."

The doctor faintly smiled.

"Don't worry," he replied. "I'll settle all that with your children."

Whereupon the grouch got so mad that he speedily recovered.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

No Temptation.
He has a fair stenographer. Her voice is low and sweet. The Titan tint is on her hair, And she has dainty feet. Her ways are gentle, and her form Is lithe and willowy. She's lovely, but between them there Is cold formality. He has no jealous wife at home To doubt him and upbraid, And so he never seems to care For flirting with the maid. —Chicago Record-Herald.

The Succession.
A teacher was hearing the class in civics and asked this question: "If the president, vice president and all the members of the cabinet died who would officiate?"

The class thought for some time, trying in vain to recall who came next in succession.

James at last had a happy inspiration, and he answered: "The undertaker."—Harper's Magazine.
