New York's Wonderful and Ever Changing Sky Line

A FEW years have made remarkable changes in the sky line of lower New York. The accompanying photograph shows buildings which would be entirely unknown to a New Yorker who had been abroad five years and fails to show others—skyscraping landmarks in their day—simply because they are hidden by more recent structures. Unmistakable, in the center, towers the Woolworth building, the tallest in the world. The second to the right, with two towers, is the Park Row building, once the tallest office building in New York. The huge new municipal building, with its cupola, is seen at the extreme left. In this general neighborhood, if the observer were in an aeroplane, might be seen two other buildings, each in its time the loftiest in the city—those of the Tribune and the World. Now, from most points on the North river water front, which forms the foreground of the picture, they are invisible by reason of their giant neighbors.

Local and Personal

The daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Snook, Lucile, had the misfortune a few days since to injure the ball of her eye, in some way, and the injury looked to be of a very serious nature.

The child was taken to Portland Tuesday morning, where the examination of a specialist will be had to ascertain the extent of the injury. The child says that she was cutting a string with a sharp pointed knife, and that the point of the knife struck her in the eye.

This office was in receipt last week of a copy of the new sheet, or news paper gotten out on the Deschutes River at Maupin, in Wasco County, E. H. Overman, publisher of the Shaniko Star, for several years, is the owner. The thriving little town of Maupin is coming to the front, and with a newspaper, can be brought before the world, by showing up its resources, we desire to offer our congratulations to our new friend Overman and the people of Maupin and vicinity.

The Epworth League, Lois Chapter No. 23693, of Madras, will erect a building south of and adjoining the Madras bank building. The building, which will be 24x40 feet, with 8x16 porch frontage, will be owned and controlled by the League and will be used at all times for the advancement of moral, religious and intellectual purposes. The building will be equipped and opened to the public as a free reading and rest room, where one may go for recreation, and to read.

The opening of this reading room will fill a long felt want in Madras, and will be highly appreciated by the majority of the people in Madras and the surrounding country. Those who started the movement for the erection of such a building are to be congratulated.

Tributary to Madras is quite a noticeable feature in the Realty business in Portland now. I am getting up a booklet of descriptions for the several farms I have, for sale in this locality. If you want to sell send me a minute description of your tract. Location as to section Township and Range and other features of interest, lowest price and terms. I think if I can place it, we can arrange satisfactorily later as to commissions. Jesse Hobson, 301 Stark St., Portland, Oregon.
