Treatment of Wheat

The purpose of treating wheat is to destroy the smut spores, or seeds of the smut plant, which are mixed with the seed wheat either as loose spores scattered over the surface and among the hairs on the ends of the kernels or as unbroken smut balls. There are several solutions which will kill smut spores when they are soaked in these solutions, the principal ones being formaline (1 lb. to 45 gallons water) and bluestone or vitriol (1 lb. to 4 gallons water). These solutions must be made up carefully in these proportions to be certain that they will kill smut spores.

Recent investigations by the plant pathologist of the state experiment station, at Pulman, Wash., show, however, that unbroken smut balls can be soaked in these solutions for several hours, even until they become soaked so as to settle to the bottom of the solution, without killing any considerable part of the spores which they contain. When one of these smut balls is broken, millions of live spores are liberated. Spores from smut balls which had been soaked 10 hours in vitriol solution germinated readily when put into moist soil.
To secure clean seed heat, therefore, the unbroken smut balls must be removed during the treatment or they will certainly be broken in the seeder and the wheat reinfected with live smut spores. The common practice of dipping the seed wheat while in sacks into the solution does not permit the removal of smut balls. Treatment should always be in an open tank or smut machine, where the wheat can be thoroughly stirred up and the smut balls skimmed off as fast as they float to the surface.
The only sure way to have clean seed is to remove all unbroken smut balls during the treatment.

Declare War on Colds.

A crusade of education which aims "that common colds may become uncommon within the next generation" has been begun by prominent New York physicians. Here is a list of the "don'ts" which the doctors say will prevent the annual visitation of the cold:
"Don't sit in a draughty car."
"Don't sleep in hot rooms."
"Don't avoid the fresh air."
"Don't stuff yourself at meal time." Overeating reduces your resistance."
To which we would add—when you take a cold get rid of it as quickly as possible. To accomplish that you will find Chamberlain's Cough Remedy most excellent. Sold by all dealers.
