At the close of the last session of Congress at least five cases of corruption in the Senate, some of them of a flagrant character, remained to be disposed of. The guilty Senators were Harlan, Pomeroy, Patterson of New Hampshire, Caldwell, and Clay-

What has the new Senate done. Of course the old Senate well knew that the New Senate could not take jurisdiction in Patterson's case, because he would not be a member. Though a committee of the old Senate had unanimously recommended the expulsion of Patterson for the grave offences of bribery and perjury, the Senate nevertheless in order to shield him, resorted to the trick of allowing his case to be sent to their successors for final action, they all the time being aware that the tribunal to which they had turned it RADWAY'S over had no power to act upon it. So Patterson was allowed to esdodge.

In the last Senate Caldwell was proven to have obtained his seat by bribery. His case came up in the new Senate, he being a member of that body. After spending three weeke in delivering arguthree weeke in delivering argu-ments and examining precedents to determine whether bribery was one of the "qualifications" for Senatorial honors specified in the Will afford Instant Ease. Constitution, the Senate allowed Caldwell to resign, and go home to Kansas and try it again.

spects worse than any of the others. To obtain his seat he had not only been guilty of corruption, but of stupendous frauds which struck at the very foundations of orderly government. The testimony was voluminous and on the plea that they had not had time to examine it, Senators passed a resolution giving the culprit a certificate of good character, and let him go!

So much for the old members. Three new ones come in stained lant. from head to foot. Patterson of South Carolina and Jones of Nevada are charged with having bought their way into the Senate, while Allison of Iowa was proven before the Poland committee to have been as deeply involved in the Credit Mobilier corruptions as any other member in Congress. What does the new Senate propose to do with these three gentleman? DR. RADWAY'S

The business of electing United States Senators for Kansas promises to become one of the most productive industries of that State. All they have to do is to have a man buy his way in, then prove bribery and force him to resign, when they are ready for a new purchase. A Kansas Legislator seems a fit person for the motto, "Small profits and quick sales."
