ASSAULT. - Yosterday (17th) afternoon says the Bulletin, quite an excitement was created in the vicinity of Central Market and Front street by a wanton assault made upon the person of Mr. McCoy, a cattle-buyer, by a sailor named John Cody. It seems that McCoy in company with Mr. Ried entered Phi'. Saunders' saloon for the purpose of perfecting a purchase of cattle. Mr. Ried paid McCoy $400, $40 of which was in silhand turned to go out of the saloon. As he pushed tue door open this man Cody struck him a neavy blow in the face, knocking him down and scattering the money in every direction. Mr. Raid came out when the assailant threatened to kill him. Neither Mr. McCoy nor Reid had seen the man before.

DONATION .- On last Wednesday evening immediately after the prayer meeting exercises, Rev. Mr. Butt, the pastor in charge of this circuit, was surprised by a donation from the citizens of this place amounting to near $50. The presentation was made by Judge Hurley in a short but appropriate speech and the donation was accepted by the minister in a few remarks well adapted to the occasion. Mr. C F. Royal deserves the praise of the community for the efforts put forth in soliciting contributions.

PROGRAMME -- The following programme has been suggested for Thanksgiving Day:

At the ringing of the bell at 10:45 the school to march to the church where some very interesting exercises will be carried on, consisting in part of prayer, and other religious exercises, music, speeches, etc., afterwards a lunch is to be spread. The exercises are calculated to continue until about two c'clock.

short distance on its way, a stow-a-way, in the person of a copper-colored native of the island, was found concealed in a hiding place below deck.

By VIRTUE of an execution duly issued out of the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon, for the county of Yamhill on the 18th day of October, A. D. 1874, on a judgment obtained in said Court on the 2th day of February, 1869, in favor of Nancy Hembree and against C. H. Walker et al. for the sum of $1,000, and tested by He was brought before the Captain, seeman. He was accordingly furnished with clothing and other appurtenances of a sailor, and was formally christened "Jim." The new recruit prosecuted his allotted labor with all the zeal and recklessness indicative of an old seaman, and attracted no attention until about the middle of February, when something peculiar was manifest in his conduct. talked and muttered in an incoherent manner, and accompanied his gabbling with gestures of the most frantic character. By order of the Captain he was ordered "forward," and the occurrence was banished from the minds of the ship's officers as matter of little moment. Shortly after his retirement to that portion of the vessel the cry of

The other unfortunate proved to be an American, named G. A. Cooper. His body was perforated in several different places. The deck was slippery with the blood which and flowed from the wounds of the murdered men. From a statement of the seamen who witnessed the cocurrence from a short distance, the Captain gleaned the following particulars: The day had been excessively sultry and disagreeable and a portion of the crew were passing their time in laying in the top gallant precastle. 'Jim," the native, whose eccentricities had excited some attention, had joined them, after receiving the admonition from the Captain.

THE TERRIBLE TRAGENY.

His advent among them did not cause much attention, and the passed comparatively unnoticed. In one moment, suddenly and without warning or immediate provocation, the native drew the knife which hong in the Frenchman's sheath and stabled him place. Who'll be the first to move in the stomach, dragging the knife across his body and making a ghastly Wm. D. Fenton, formerly of this wound. The infuriated native then sprang at another member of the crew and effected a violent lunge at him, but fortunately the assailed seaman was too agile and escaped with a six inch rent in his shirt. The unfortunate Cooper was the next one attacked, but unfortunately he was not armed at the time, and his attempts to defeat the native's infugated assault were utterly useless. He did not fall to the deck, however, until he had fought like a demon for his life and had received sever terrible stabs in the breast, face and thighs.

THE SAVAGE AT BAY After a terrible struggle with Cooper the native sprung into the forecastle, where he imagined himelf secure from harm. The crew were afraid to HARKER & CO., Ferry street; dry
