It only costs a man one dollar to nominate himself for office in Kentucky. An advertisement does it.

CINCINNATI hotels made $250,000 out of the Convention. Republican leaders have terrible appetites and drinkables.

The New York Sentry calls George Alfred Townsend "the carry-over of the press." George will carry on as before.

The patent ice machines in New Orleans make 300 tons of ice per day, and this amount can be doubled if necessary.

SRVIA vs. Turkey is little dog vs. big dog, and it is characteristic of Americans to sympathize with the little dog in a fight.

It beats all, but it is a fact that a fashionable young lady can wear an organdy dress around when a man shivers for the want of an overcoat.

THREE men out of every four in Connecticut have their lives insured. This may look strange at first sight, but did you ever live in Connecticut?

The New York Herald says that one-half the crowd of smokers can't tell a one-cent cigar from a twenty-five cent one, except as they have to pay for it.

THERE is hardly a town in Ohio without its citizen who is a cousin to Rutherford B. Hayes. The last count showed enough to fill all the offices but one.

THE Tennessee preacher, who delivered a lecture on the African heathen, had only closed when he had to fork over $35 license fee to go to jail. He forked.

THE local officials refuse to let any one indulge in a tight-rope performance over Niagara Falls, but it is easy enough to borrow a gun and commit suicide decently.

AFTER the fun is all over, the New York Mail is mean enough to say: "If Hail Columbia were a poor widow, she might starve, unless she could eat fire-crackers."

We notice that a country paper, size 10x13, printed in this State, is attacking the Star in a very savage manner. Money can't suppress the liberty of the press in the old Wolverine State.

ACCORDING to the monthly reports made by Rowell's Reporter, Michigan has had less change in her press than any other State in the Union with an equal number of papers. We don't refer to specie.

MOBILLY remarks the Terre Haute Express of the 5th: "There were many cows running at large in this State, but were merely an ordinary day and not the centennial of our independence as a nation."

DURING a recent tornado a couple of Pennsylvania boys were up in a cherry tree stealing cherries. The tornado carried off the cherry tree, and neither the tree nor the boys have been seen since. Moral: Never tell a lie.—Boston Post.

A CHICAGO surgeon, called in the night to perform an operation, put the necessary instruments into a bag and started. A policeman stopped him, examined the contents of the bag, refused to believe that they were not burglar's tools, and arrested the surgeon.—Exchange.

Preaching for Seven Dollars a Year. Under the head of the latter might come an aged resident of the neighborhood who had preached round about there for nearly half a century. He is an Englishman past eighty, and moderately intelligent. "I've been hunk 'ere a long time," he said, "and I like the country well enough, but I can't get on at all here. It's a good place for 'alth, but talent isn't properly appreciated. I've been preaching for forty-six years, and how much money do you think I've been paid for it?"

Not getting even a guess in reply, the old gentleman went on: "I've preached for forty-six years, and all the money I've received amounts to just seven dollars a year. I've a little place now, you see, and it supports me. If I didn't I could never get on. Seven dollars a year wouldn't do. If I don't find fault with the country, but talent don't seem to be appreciated in it. Seven dollars a year is very small pay for preaching the gospel."

Another curiosity is also a preacher, or dominie, as the country people call him, who has an astonishing mania on the subject of tobacco. He rarely allows a man to pass without stopping him and asking him for some tobacco. A few years ago his house was burned and his neighbors made up a purse of $50 to help him. After getting the money he paid a visit to New York, and spent the whole amount for tobacco. The neighbors who made it up did not fancy this use of it, but he assured them that the tobacco was a good investment, and added that $50 more would get him another lot which was very cheap. They didn't respond, and the probabilities are that he won't invest any more of their money in tobacco.

True Love not the Fashion. The country never possessed so many beautiful and marriageable young women as it does at the present time. And why do we not have more marriages? We answer:—Because marriage for love is the exception and not the rule. The young people of this age have gone fashion and money-mad. If the dandy bank clerk, who pays one-half his income for board and the other half for clothes cannot improve his condition, he will not marry. The shop-girl who earns good wages and cannot be distinguished by her dress from the banker's daughter, certainly will not plunge into matrimony unless she can better her condition in life. If a man is fortunate enough to possess money, it matters not how old and ugly he may be, hundreds of intelligent, handsome young women can be found, only too willing to become his wife. Love is an after-consideration. They marry to be supported and dressed extravagantly. How often do we hear the remark, "Better be an old man's darling than a young man's slave!" Alas! too many of them are not satisfied to be darlings. They will persist in loving other men after they are married.

It cannot be denied that a great number of the unmarried men are adventurers looking for wives who can keep them without working for a living. The peace and contentment of a happy home is not taken into consideration.—Argus.

PEANUT oil, first made in the South during the war, is now in large demand. It supplies the place of almond and olive oils for various uses, and is lower in price, retains its purity and flavor for a long time, and is less susceptible to the effect of light than olive oil. The oil is extracted entirely from the meat of the nut by pressure, the refuse being used as cattle feed or a fertilizer.—The South.

A Crocodile Crusade.

David Copperfield was not the only boy who delighted in crocodiles, for your humble servant the writer has always viewed the crocodile of the Nile with much veneration as an inhabitant of the land through which old Nilus flows. I used to sit and pore over the natural history books which told of these huge creatures seizing their prey, man or quadruped, coming down to drink; then of the way in which they dragged the struggling creatures into and beneath the water, to drown and devour them at leisure. Those books used to give me goose-skin—the style of horror that young people enjoy as much as a good ghost story. At the same time, after reading my fill of descriptions of these sanguinary monsters, I used to make a row, namely, that I would save up all my pocket money, buy a gun, go out to Egypt on a crusade against crocodiles.

Alas! I never saved up that pocket money till it arrived at the sum of two shillings and sixpence, without breaking down to despair. There was fatality about that half-crown. Up to two and three was easy enough, but two and six culminated in weakness. For there are so many things that can be bought for half-a-crown; scarlet flannel cricketer's caps, patent boots, four-bladed knives, and a host of other things, all of which are, if it were generally known, the most facile coin in the world for gliding through the fingers, it is so easily spent.

It was not through my own savings, then, but simply from being called upon from matters of business, that I at last got to the half-crown. I was, at that time, when I did look upon the muddy stream all my old feelings came back, and I determined to have a run up, gun in hand, in one of the dahabeahs.

My acquaintance with the crocodile had not largely increased since boyhood's days, for I had been compelled to study the natural history of seas and spices from the East instead of the animal kingdom. I knew, however, that the crocodile of the Nile was a different creature from the alligator of America, and the mugger of the Ganges and other Indian rivers. In fact, I believe it takes precedence for size over any of the others; though some monsters have been found in tropic Australia, a land formerly believed to be free from such an insect pest, as Mark Twain would have called it. In fact, I have seen a dead specimen from Australia some years ago.

In olden times, and probably here and there still lurking about some particularly juicy mudbank, there were crocodiles in the Nile thirty feet long, but these were few and far between, like the great pike of our rivers and lakes; and, to my great disgust, I want on day after another slowly slipping up the stream, without getting a shot at a single reptile. Certainly there were the ruins of ancient Egypt on either bank to console me a little; but I had come to see crocodiles—the great types of the little creatures I used to see in the Nile, and I was not to be so disappointed.

At last I had a shot at the nose of a crocodile, which was pointed out to me by one of the boatmen, peering out from some reeds by the muddy shore. I fired, and the plume that followed I had the pleasure of seeing a swirl in the water, which betokened that mine enemy had been killed, not shot.

I wanted to see one of the thirty-foot monsters, and to have a fair shot at his eye, so, as a matter of course, I did not get on my feet, but I was at length rewarded by a good view of some six or seven of the uncleanly beasts. It was quite early one morning that a boatman aroused me, and, taking my gun, I looked where he pointed, towards a sparse bed of reeds; then, getting a powerful double-barrelled gun, he pointed me to a spot far out of my ideas of shot, and had a good quiet inspection of the reptiles. Some were on a mud-bank, and others were straggling in and out of the water in an indolent, careless way; and I could not help being struck by the utter want of stiffness displayed by them, and considered to be inseparable to their scaly forms. Far from being rigid, they seemed to me to be tolerably lithe, and very undulatory in their movements, while their heads had a rounded chubbiness of contour that I had not expected to see.

But instead of being the monstrous creatures I had imagined, the largest was not more than ten feet in length. All the same, though, they would have made terrible adversaries in the water. They scuffled out of sight long before we came within easy range, and I had to be satisfied for I saw no more, and my great crocodile crusade remains unattempted to the present day.

TREELING FOXES.—Wish Miller, the well-known hunter of Hoy's Wilderness, writes to the Genius of Liberty, of Uniontown, Md., as follows:—"Some of our old hunters claim that they never saw nor heard of a fox treeling on the outside of a tree. I claim that I have treeled both red and gray foxes up straight and crooked trees. For reference they can call upon John Russell Frey, of the McClelland House, or Lindsey Messmore. We were hunting a few weeks ago in Garrett county, Md., when we started a gray fox; after a hard chase it was treeled up a straight tree without a limb twenty feet from the ground. The baying of the hounds ceasing suddenly we went down and found the fox comfortably located in a fork of the tree. We concluded to start him and give him a chance for his life. He started pretty lively and in a few minutes was treeled on a crooked tree. He refused to come down and was shot by one of the party.

"The next morning being favorable we started a red fox, which we caught after a hard chase of three hours. The same day we bagged a large catamount, in the fight with which 'Buster' was disabled in one leg, which we feared at first would prove disastrous to his noted feetness, but happily it did not."

BASELINE is not so much the effect of an ill education as the proper gift and provision of a wife's nature. Every stage of life has its set of manners that is suited to it and best becomes it. Each is beautiful in its season; and you might as well quarrel with the child's rattle, and advance him directly to the boy's top and span-fishing, as to expect from diffident youth the manly confidence of riper years.—Bishop Hurd.

THE cotton factories which Li Hung Chang—the virtual ruler of China—intends to establish at Ningpo may prove the beginning of an industrial movement which will deprive Great Britain of one of her best customers for textile fabrics. The Chinese have as good reason to expect success in making cotton goods as the East Indians, who have made great progress within the last two years.

Jefferson's Marriage.

The affair was quite a little comedy in some aspects, and ended, as all comedies should, with everybody made happy.

"Heloids" had been married many years, and her old admirer was approaching thirty, when he met with a young lady of twenty-two who produced a strong impression upon him. She was a little above the medium height, slender, but elegantly formed. A fair complexion, with a delicate tint of the rose, large hazel eyes, full of life and feeling, and luxuriant hair of a rich soft auburn, furnished a combination of attractions which was eminently calculated to move the heart of a youthful bachelor. In addition to all this, the lady was admirably graceful; she rode, danced, and moved with elegant ease, and sang and played on the harpsichord very sweetly. And still to these accomplishments the possession of excellent good sense, very considerable cultivation, a warm heart, and a considerable fortune, and it will not be difficult to understand how the youthful Mr. Jefferson came to visit very frequently at the lady's residence, in the county of Charles City. It was called "The Forest," and the name of the lady was Mrs. Martha Skelton. She was a daughter of John Wayles, an eminent lawyer, who had married her in 1768, and died in 1783, leaving his young wife a widow at the age of twenty-three. She was a daughter of John Skelton, who, dying in 1768, left his young wife a widow at the age of twenty-three. Mechanics' Institute Fair.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE ELEVENTH INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION—PROMISERS OF A LARGE AND SUPERB DISPLAY IN MANY DEPARTMENTS.

The Managers of the Eleventh Industrial Fair, to be held under the auspices of the Mechanics' Institute, are actively at work now arranging for the forthcoming Exhibition. A meeting of the Board of Directors will be held this evening at the report of the committee on Literary Exercises submitted. The Committee will inform the Directors that the Managers have selected as the place most suitable for the opening exercises. The programme will embrace the address by President Halliday, the oration by Henry Edwards, and the presentation of the diploma of vocal and instrumental music.

It is the intention this year to make the mechanical concert the leading feature of the Exhibition, and to that end Herold's services were engaged, and permission granted to increase the number of musicians. Those who attended the Fair last year will recollect that the pleasure of listening to the music was diminished by the constant rattling of the machinery department. To overcome that objection it has been decided to run the Fair from Mission to Market streets on the first floor, and thus separate the machinery department from the concert hall. Under that order of things, visitors in search of mechanical knowledge can pursue their search for information without any annoyance from the brass band or the orchestra who want to give their whole souls to the enjoyment of the music can do so without inwardly despising the inventors of clock time.
