

Table with subscription rates: One Copy, One Year; One Copy, Six Months; One Copy, Three Months.

Legal Advertisements to be paid for, upon making Proof by the Publisher. Personal Advertisements 50 cents a Line. Subscriptions sent East, $2 00 a Year.

LAFAYETTE COURIER.

VOL. XI--NO. 51.

LAFAYETTE, OREGON, FEBRUARY 9, 1877.

PRICE TEN CENTS.

Table with advertising rates: One Week, One Month, Three Months, Six Months, One Year.

BUSINESS NOTICES. In the Local Columns, 25 cts per Line. RACE EXERCISES.

Dreams of the Future.

I'm dreaming sweet dreams of the future, darling, And love paints a vision of thee-- In a neat little cot our own, darling, Where you shall be happy and free.

They Say.

There were three of us women together that morning. We happened to meet at the milliner's, and the room was so cosy and attractive that we forgot ourselves, and set and chatted for an hour.

How a Bird Flies.

The most prominent fact about a bird is a faculty which it possesses of being able to fly. It is a faculty which it shares with many other creatures, except the bat and insects--its power of flying.

ANECDOTE OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN.

One day during the war a lady called at the capitol to see Col. Forney, the Secretary of the War, a soldier, sentenced to death for desertion, was to be shot the next morning. The lady had become interested in the poor fellow. She wished Col. Forney to introduce her to President Lincoln, and to aid her in securing the pardon of his pardon.

FOR PRIZES ON THE FACE.

Avoid all greasy and indigestible food, take a few drops of exercise without becoming overheated, keep early hours, and bathe all over daily in cold or lukewarm water. Use as lotion the following: Powdered borax, half an ounce; pure glycerine, one ounce; camphor water, one quart; mix, and wet the face with this morning and evening; let it remain on a few minutes, then wash off with soft water.

Indeed they did.

"Indeed they did," said Mrs. Atkins, "and I'll never get over it, if I live to the ripe old age of Methusalem!"

Well, the confounded gossip had the story out years ago.

"Well, the confounded gossip had the story out years ago, and I've no doubt but it still comes up to the surface, especially when a new family moves into the neighborhood, that I sold butter to Levi Carter--great big yellow rolls--inside of which were stones; and don't you think the last time the story came to me was when the stones had turned into a dead kitten?"

How a Bird Flies.

The most prominent fact about a bird is a faculty which it possesses of being able to fly. It is a faculty which it shares with many other creatures, except the bat and insects--its power of flying.

ANECDOTE OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN.

One day during the war a lady called at the capitol to see Col. Forney, the Secretary of the War, a soldier, sentenced to death for desertion, was to be shot the next morning. The lady had become interested in the poor fellow. She wished Col. Forney to introduce her to President Lincoln, and to aid her in securing the pardon of his pardon.

FOR PRIZES ON THE FACE.

Avoid all greasy and indigestible food, take a few drops of exercise without becoming overheated, keep early hours, and bathe all over daily in cold or lukewarm water. Use as lotion the following: Powdered borax, half an ounce; pure glycerine, one ounce; camphor water, one quart; mix, and wet the face with this morning and evening; let it remain on a few minutes, then wash off with soft water.

WHY WASH WITH A SPOONED CANDLE.

For the first coat mix to every two quarts of whitesash one cup of fine sifted alkali. This will prevent the smoke from striking through. After this another coat may be put on in the ordinary manner.

Bitter Cream.

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman thus explains the cause of Bitter Cream:

Cream becomes bitter by long keeping in the cans. If the milk is left after the fourth day it is unfit to be used in coffee or made into butter, spoiling both.

Livingstone's Boyhood.

The boyhood and subsequent life of Livingstone, the missionary explorer of Africa, illustrates the lines: "Honor and shame from no condition rise; Act well thy part, there all the honor lies."

The Price of the Cauliflower.

Two gentlemen, many years ago, were walking through the fruit and vegetable market of Dublin. One of them remarked on the good humor of the hucksters.

A King's Revenge.

Frederick the Great, of Prussia, admitted Voltaire as an intimate friend. The poet was for years a great favorite at court, and received many favors from the monarch.

COFFEE PUDDING.

One cupful of sugar, cream with one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter; one egg, beaten to a froth; one cupful of milk, savoring out some to dissolve a teaspoonful of soda with; one pint of sifted flour, with two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar mixed through it; lastly, the soda, thoroughly dissolved. Bake in a buttered cake pan, and eat with sauce.

BAKING APPLES.

Buy a small tin apple-corer with its many appendages; core with it as many apples as you want, without peeling them; stem them on a tin dish; place this in a hot oven, having first filled up the vacancies left by your surgery with the best of sugar. Let them bake till they are well done. Take them out, and if you do not know what to do next call in your nearest and best friend for further advice.

GRANAM BISCUIT WITHOUT YEAST.

Mix your flour with warm (not hot) milk and water to the consistency of batter, with a little salt. Grease your pan--make it hissing hot, and pour in your batter. Set it for a moment on the range to rise, then into a quick oven, and serve them as soon as baked, because they fall.

Old Boston Hospitality.

The hospitality of the people of Boston, and their fondness for stately ceremonies on public occasions, date from the early settlement of the town.

Mrs. Spotted Tail Jealous.

Immediately upon their arrival, the aborigines spread over the depot platform. Old Spotted Tail bore no hint in paying his respects to Major Henry, who was proprietor of the depot eating stand.

POPULATION OF LONDON.

Of the total population of London returned by the registrar in 1871 (3,354,280), 3,029,369 were born in England and Wales, 41,089 in Scotland, 91,171 in Ireland, 20,324 in the colonies and India, 5,170 in the islands of the British sea, and 1,205 in ships at sea.

THE SULTAN'S MANNERS.

The Sultan of Turkey is one of the central figures in that little group upon which history is looking just now with special interest. He has the blood of a long race of conquerors in his veins, but he is not worthy of his illustrious ancestry.

AMERICAN PAPER.

So greatly has the manufacture of paper in this country been improved of late years that it can be produced here and sold in London at moderate prices. The first year after the war paper was imported, and American manufactured paper, whenever offered here, was frowned upon.

PRESIDENT ROBINSON.

President Robinson, of Brown University, says that we can better afford to have a wooden head over a college than a modern one. The Chickasaw have four public and about ten district schools. The Choctaws have two public schools and over fifty district schools. The Creeks have three public schools and about thirty district schools.

THE PRESBYTERY OF NEWARK.

The Presbytery of Newark stands by St. Paul. Mr. See has been found guilty by a vote of 16 to 12, of violating both Scriptural command and church usage, in allowing women to preach in his pulpit. This may put a little life into an old controversy, and certainly adds one to the list of martyrs.

The Senators Who Talk.

Senator Conkling uses more high-toned English than any of his fellow-members. Frequently his style is almost 81. Elmish, his speeches being often profusely sprinkled with words sufficient to render his ordinary hearer to the dictionary for information.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Morton is never flowery in his talk. He uses good plain English, and in such a manner that his meaning is perfectly clear to the most obtuse listener. He has the faculty of boiling down to the substance of an opponent's argument for the purpose of answering it to a greater extent than any other Senator.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Thurman is, without doubt, the most vigorous talker of all the Senators. He is also the most irritable. The worthy persecutions of Edmunds often make him extremely irascible. He clears up very easily, and sometimes in the midst of his most terrible denunciations of Republicans he will soften down by making a grotesque joke at the expense of an opponent.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Senator Logan is the most unsteady talker in the Senate. He rarely speaks from his seat, but prefers to walk to the center aisle where he can see everybody and talk to his occupant. As he warms up he advances from the aisle, and when very impassioned, he generally manages to make his way to the space in front of the President's desk, where he indulges in his favorite gesture, which consists in saluting his fingers in a very mysterious manner.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Merrimon, of North Carolina, is another Senator who talks a great deal on almost every subject that comes up. Sometimes he is interesting, but more frequently the long harangues drive the other members to the cloak room. He is unquestionably a fair minded man, although an extremely prejudiced one.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Boye, of Missouri, is ambitious in his favoring finger, in a very mysterious manner. On such occasions he is very interesting, because he is both earnest and vigorous. He is as well listened to as any other member of the Senate.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Merrimon, of North Carolina, is another Senator who talks a great deal on almost every subject that comes up. Sometimes he is interesting, but more frequently the long harangues drive the other members to the cloak room. He is unquestionably a fair minded man, although an extremely prejudiced one.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Boye, of Missouri, is ambitious in his favoring finger, in a very mysterious manner. On such occasions he is very interesting, because he is both earnest and vigorous. He is as well listened to as any other member of the Senate.

The Senators Who Talk.

Senator Conkling uses more high-toned English than any of his fellow-members. Frequently his style is almost 81. Elmish, his speeches being often profusely sprinkled with words sufficient to render his ordinary hearer to the dictionary for information.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Morton is never flowery in his talk. He uses good plain English, and in such a manner that his meaning is perfectly clear to the most obtuse listener. He has the faculty of boiling down to the substance of an opponent's argument for the purpose of answering it to a greater extent than any other Senator.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Thurman is, without doubt, the most vigorous talker of all the Senators. He is also the most irritable. The worthy persecutions of Edmunds often make him extremely irascible. He clears up very easily, and sometimes in the midst of his most terrible denunciations of Republicans he will soften down by making a grotesque joke at the expense of an opponent.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Senator Logan is the most unsteady talker in the Senate. He rarely speaks from his seat, but prefers to walk to the center aisle where he can see everybody and talk to his occupant. As he warms up he advances from the aisle, and when very impassioned, he generally manages to make his way to the space in front of the President's desk, where he indulges in his favorite gesture, which consists in saluting his fingers in a very mysterious manner.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Merrimon, of North Carolina, is another Senator who talks a great deal on almost every subject that comes up. Sometimes he is interesting, but more frequently the long harangues drive the other members to the cloak room. He is unquestionably a fair minded man, although an extremely prejudiced one.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Boye, of Missouri, is ambitious in his favoring finger, in a very mysterious manner. On such occasions he is very interesting, because he is both earnest and vigorous. He is as well listened to as any other member of the Senate.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Merrimon, of North Carolina, is another Senator who talks a great deal on almost every subject that comes up. Sometimes he is interesting, but more frequently the long harangues drive the other members to the cloak room. He is unquestionably a fair minded man, although an extremely prejudiced one.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Boye, of Missouri, is ambitious in his favoring finger, in a very mysterious manner. On such occasions he is very interesting, because he is both earnest and vigorous. He is as well listened to as any other member of the Senate.

The Senators Who Talk.

Senator Conkling uses more high-toned English than any of his fellow-members. Frequently his style is almost 81. Elmish, his speeches being often profusely sprinkled with words sufficient to render his ordinary hearer to the dictionary for information.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Morton is never flowery in his talk. He uses good plain English, and in such a manner that his meaning is perfectly clear to the most obtuse listener. He has the faculty of boiling down to the substance of an opponent's argument for the purpose of answering it to a greater extent than any other Senator.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Thurman is, without doubt, the most vigorous talker of all the Senators. He is also the most irritable. The worthy persecutions of Edmunds often make him extremely irascible. He clears up very easily, and sometimes in the midst of his most terrible denunciations of Republicans he will soften down by making a grotesque joke at the expense of an opponent.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Senator Logan is the most unsteady talker in the Senate. He rarely speaks from his seat, but prefers to walk to the center aisle where he can see everybody and talk to his occupant. As he warms up he advances from the aisle, and when very impassioned, he generally manages to make his way to the space in front of the President's desk, where he indulges in his favorite gesture, which consists in saluting his fingers in a very mysterious manner.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Merrimon, of North Carolina, is another Senator who talks a great deal on almost every subject that comes up. Sometimes he is interesting, but more frequently the long harangues drive the other members to the cloak room. He is unquestionably a fair minded man, although an extremely prejudiced one.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Boye, of Missouri, is ambitious in his favoring finger, in a very mysterious manner. On such occasions he is very interesting, because he is both earnest and vigorous. He is as well listened to as any other member of the Senate.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Merrimon, of North Carolina, is another Senator who talks a great deal on almost every subject that comes up. Sometimes he is interesting, but more frequently the long harangues drive the other members to the cloak room. He is unquestionably a fair minded man, although an extremely prejudiced one.

THE SENATORS WHO TALK.

Mr. Boye, of Missouri, is ambitious in his favoring finger, in a very mysterious manner. On such occasions he is very interesting, because he is both earnest and vigorous. He is as well listened to as any other member of the Senate.