The Farmer Feedeth All.

My lord rides through his palace gate, My lady sweeps along in state, The sage thinks long on many a thing, And the maiden moods on merriment; The minstrel harpeth merrily; The sailor ploughs the foaming sea, The husbandman tills the good red ear, And the soldier wars withouten fear, But fall to each what'er befall, The farmer he must feed them all.

Death or Marriage.

The ancient clock in Deacon Sherman's old-fashioned kitchen was slowly chiming the hour of nine. It was no smart toy, no trifle of bronze or alabaster, but a tall, square, solid relic of the last century, looking not unlike a coffin-case set on end in the corner—a clock that had lasted through four generations, and, judging from appearances, was likely to last through several more.

Sunlight.

We have slightly noticed the great and beneficent influence of sunlight in some previous papers; but now we wish to discuss this subject more particularly and extensively. Everyone has observed the effect of sunlight upon vegetables. Plants that are kept in a dark room do not grow well or blossom freely, if at all.

The "Praying Man" of the Cataract.

In the course of his second paper, "A Winter on the Nile," in Scribner for February, General McClellan describes the picturesque scene of the passage of the First Cataract. We make the following extract:

Roman Women.

They are the direct opposite of a German Gretchen, whose blonde tresses are wound round a gentle, dreamy little head, and whose blue eyes look even by day as though they were full of the soft glimmer of moonlight.

Steel Pens.

Everybody who has used Gillott's 808s will be interested in the following description of a visit to the manufactory in Birmingham, which we take from the English Mechanic.

Scenes on Russian Railroads.

North or South, there is scarcely any difference between the aspect of the Russian stations. For hundreds of versts you have been jolting through a flat or slightly undulating series of enormous snow-clad plains. Stunted birch, fir and larch are all the flora you perceive.

Turkish Women.

Women of all classes learn early to repress their natural emotions and feelings while in the presence of their superiors or masters. Slave girls show no sign of feeling in the presence of the mistress; but once out of the range of the mistress's eye, surrounded only by those she can trust, the slave casts off the habitually assumed indifference of manner, and gives free play to her natural style, mode of speech and characteristic gestures.
