It's of the utmost importance for any group to have a work superintendent; for instance, I have seen that the Dirge group is always so solemn and serious when it sings, because they have a work superintendent to keep them in check. However, when they sing without a supervisor, they tend to be more relaxed and cheerful. Just like a ship has to have a captain to steer it, a choir needs a work superintendent to guide its performance.