MACHINERY FOR C. A. SMITH MILL

Alliance Brings Large Shipment for the New Plant Under Construction.

The steamer Alliance arrived yesterday from Portland with a full cargo of freight, including a large shipment for the C. A. Smith Lumber and Manufacturing company. The Alliance also brought down two big boilers, which were unloaded at North Bend. A large edger was also unloaded at North Bend.

The C. A. Smith company received one of its 750 horse power engines, which was taken to the new Smith dock and unloaded direct from the ship to the new wharf. The company has another engine of like size which is now lying on the dock at Portland awaiting shipment. In addition to the second engine there are about four or five cars of miscellaneous machinery in Portland to be shipped. The Alliance will sail from Marshfield this afternoon at 1 o'clock sharp.

R. M. HALL ON COOS BAY

Well Known Magazine Writer Visits Marshfield to Gather Statistics For Story.

EASTERN MAGAZINES

Will Contain an Article on Oregon Including the Coos Bay Country.

The year 1907 promises many good things for the Coos Bay country in the way of publicity.

Extended stories in the large and influential Eastern publications have always been considered the best publicity that Oregon could possibly receive, and the fact that Rinaldo M. Hall, formerly advertising manager of the Harriman lines, has succeeded in inducing the several big publications he represents on the coast to accept 10,000 words on Oregon this year will be good news to the state at large.

Mr. Hall is in Marshfield gathering statistics for his stories, this being his first trip to Coos Bay. He is most agreeably impressed with Marshfield, the wonderful progress this city is making and the splendid inducements to the homeseeker and investor.

During Mr. Hall's service with the railroad, he formed a very extensive acquaintance with Eastern publishers, and their knowledge of his ability as a descriptive writer opened up the gateway for the great work he will do for the state and coast. These stories will cover every industry in Oregon and will do much toward inducing new settlers and investors to this section. More than a week will be spent by Mr. Hall in Marshfield, North Bend, Bandon and other places in the Coos Bay country.

NEW ORDINANCE.

E. L. C. Farrin, city attorney, has been instructed to draw up an ordinance requiring real estate men doing business in the city of Marshfield to pay a license of $250 a year. This ordinance will be introduced at the next meeting of the city council.

RAILROAD WORK BEING STARTED

The Southern Pacific Begins Active Operations on the Drain Line to Coos Bay.

The report comes from Drain that active work on a large scale will begin on the Southern Pacific railroad at that point in a short time. In fact, it is already started. The contractors are busy getting men and teams on the ground for the summer work.

The company is still receiving a great deal of cement, and has several barges busy all the time conveying cement from the vessels to the warehouses.

Up Coos River.

Clarence Gould has moved his donkey engine up Coos river, and will use it taking logs out of the river.
