The Ruby.

There are four degrees of merit in the ruby class. The first is the deep blood red oriental ruby—the "cochineal red"—pure, suggestive, without admixture of the brown or violet. The second is the spinel, almost as beautiful as the oriental, but a shade less rich, less supreme in color. The third is the balas, a rose red ruby, valuable in proportion to its depth of tint and esteemed perfect only when it attains a certain size and weight. A small pale balas ruby is of very meager value. The fourth is the almandine, or rubicelle, of a yellowish red, oftentimes tinged with brown. The Brazilian topaz is not infrequently made to pass for balas ruby. It is heated in a crucible filled with sand, which drives off the yellow and fills in the rose red tint of the balas ruby. Garnets, too, have often done duty for rubies, and many a writer has confounded garnets, rubies and carbuncles all in a heap together.

Sunday Dyspepsia.

"Sunday dyspepsia—that is what you have," said the doctor, smiling.
 "Sunday dyspepsia?"
 "Yes, and it is not a rare complaint either. It is due to this bad habit of eating foolishly and gluttonously on Sunday. Through the week you eat like a sensible man—a moderate breakfast early, a light luncheon and a good, substantial dinner at the end of the day. But on Sunday you eat a heavy breakfast at 10 or 11. At 1 you sit down to an enormous dinner, stuffing yourself without appetite, and at 6:30, when you are really hungry, you eat light, unsatisfactory food, like Saratoga chips and lettuce sandwiches—in a word, a Sunday supper. The result of this change for the worse, made once a week by millions of men, is Sunday dyspepsia, an ailment for which I always prescribe a 6 o'clock Sunday dinner."—New York Press.
