POTATO CROP PROMISES WELL

Local Products Will Find Ready Sale Because of Lateness of California Crop

ADVISE GOOD SORTING

Efforts in That Line Will Result in Large Market For Oregon Progeny.

Of special interest to potato growers as well as dealers was the announcement made during the past week that a Salem firm had contracted with a San Francisco house for 35,000 bushels of potatoes for shipment during the months of September and October of this season at $1.10 per 100 pounds.

The announcement of the closing of the contract resulted in a division of opinion among the trade; some contending that it was merely a bluff and that the San Francisco house had merely given the seed stock to the Salem growers with the understanding that the crop was to be sold to them at $1.10 per 100 pounds, including the cost of the seed.

However, this was not the general opinion of the trade. At this time it is generally believed that the early potato market the coming season will be the best of the year for the reason that supplies at the time of the contracted delivery are expected to be light on account of the lateness of the California crop.

The California season has been backward because of unfavorable weather. The islands along the San Joaquin and Sacramento rivers, which produce most of the potatoes, were flooded for a long period and some of them are just getting into condition for planting. This has resulted in a demand for seed that is causing old potatoes to be eagerly sought at quite good prices. However, on this account California will not move the bulk of her crop early as heretofore, and this will give the Oregon grower of early stock a chance.

In this connection the Oregon potato grower has a chance to make some money and likewise regain some of that reputation he has lost in recent years. Alaska will need a large portion of our supplies of early potatoes. California usually gets a large—in fact the larger slice of this trade. This year the bulk of the Alaska business will come to Oregon for this State is always given the preference, price considered.

If the Oregon potato growers will properly sort their potatoes this season it will mean that this State will in the future secure practically all the northern business—almost at our own price. California will likewise use a larger per cent of Oregon potatoes during the early part of the present season than usual. This is on account of the lateness of her own crop. Good sorting will mean much in this case, too, and the future markets for Oregon potatoes will be made or unmade by our own growers this season.

Samples received during the past week show the coming crop to be in good shape. Some slight damage is reported in parts of Clackamas county on account of the early cold snap, but conditions for the crop are generally good.

TASK FOR MONEY EXPERTS.

Days "Twould Require to Count Fortunes of Big Millionaires."
If the wealth of the rich men of the United States could be reduced to national bank notes it would not be as great a task for the nineteen expert money counters of the United States treasury to tally and set the amount down in books as the average man thinks it would. Working in the leisurely fashion the government permits, it would take the nineteen experts a little more than fifty-two days to ascertain the exact number of Rockefeller's dollars. Assuming that Weyerhaeusers, the head of the lumber trust, has $600,000,000, the count of his wealth would be completed in just about the length of time it rained during Noah's yachting cruise.

Say J. Piermont Morgan and Andrew Carnegie each own $350,000,000, the count of their hoard would be completed in twenty-four days. All the vast hoard of poor millionaires having about $15,000,000 would get one day's attention. Those having less than $14,500,000 would be dismissed in six hours.

These figures are the result of a count made of the "unused" money in one of the vaults under control of William B. Ridgely, comptroller of the currency. The count was finished a few days ago, having been under way twelve working days. For six years there had been no count of the money in the vault, and it occurred to Mr. Ridgely that he ought to satisfy himself that the $176,000,000 the books showed to be in the vault was actually there. The count showed that there were as many dollars in the vault as the books said there should be.

Thirty-eight years ago a negro stole a package containing 1,500 sheets of unsigned bank notes. He had a high time signing the names of the president and cashier of the bank for which the notes had been engraved. Congress appropriated $5,000 to pay for the spurious notes issued by him to innocent persons, but only $125 worth of the forged notes ever came to the treasury for redemption.
