

FIGHTING FOR HAYWOOD'S LIFE

Defense In Steunenberg Murder
Case Picks Orchard's Story
Into Shreds

EVIDENCE IN REBUTTAL

Testimony Offered Shows That Motives of Revenge Led to Killing of Governor.

Boise, June 26.—William F. Davis, of Goldfield, one of the most important witnesses for the defense, was called to the stand today and his cross-examination was not completed when court adjourned. Orchard has testified that Davis led and commanded the mob that destroyed the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mines in 1899, and inspired, as the agent of Haywood and Moyer, the Vindicator explosion and train wrecking plot at Cripple Creek, and was an accomplice in the Independence station crime. Direct examination by Darrow has went over the story of his working, including the pathetic story of the death of his wife and babe at Cripple Creek, at which he wept, and made a positive denial of every statement of Orchard that involved him or his associates in any form of crime. He denied he even was a member of the union when the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mine was blown up, and at the conclusion of his general story said that at Cripple Creek during the strike Orchard told him of the Hercules mine affair and threatened to kill Steunenberg. The cross-examination of Davis by Senator Borah was severe and searching, and was chiefly devoted as far as it proceeded, with the Bunker Hill and Sullivan affair, and the circumstances under which Orchard made the threat against Steunenberg. Davis asserted that he remained at Gem the day the Bunker Hill mine was blown up, and while there he saw the train in charge of the masked men arrive at and depart from Gem. He could not name anyone on the train except Engineer Hutton. He said there was no excitement, and he made no inquiry about the mob. He said he remained in hiding after the mill was blown up because he did not want to be deported or thrown into the "bull pen," and he changed his name when he departed for Butte because he feared the mine owners' blacklist, made up from the petition that the Bunker Hill employees had sent Governor McConenll protesting against the unsafety of the mine. Borah showed the petition had been presented six years before, and that Butte was in the Federation camp where the black list was ineffective. Passing to the threat Orchard made against Steunenberg, the witness was unable to recall what anyone else had said on that occasion except the words of Orchard. Davis returns to the stand tomorrow.

Mrs. Lottie Day, of Denver, testified in 1904 that Orchard told her about the loss of the Hercules interest, and, with that the chance to support the only woman he ever really loved, and that he said he would kill Steunenberg for the wrong she had done him, and John D. Elliott, an old soldier, swore Orchard told him on a train in Idaho late in the fall of 1905 that he was in the employ of the mine owners, and said there was a plot against the Federation and its leaders. The cross-examination showed the fact that Elliott had twice been an inmate of the insane asylum with his mind unbalanced by family troubles. John M. O'Neill, editor of the 1st's Magazine, was the only other witness during the day. He testified Orchard came to his office July 1905 and asked for the address of Governor Peabody and General Bell, whom he said should be bumped off. O'Neill said he referred Orchard to the city directory. The State used the cross-examination of O'Neill to make it clear that the magazine was the official organ of the Federation and expressed its views, and to read to the jury some scathing articles about the death of Steunenberg. O'Neill also said he had seen Orchard at the Federation headquarters several times and that Steve Adams and Mrs. Adams had also been there.

BISHOP SCADDING BELIEVES IN BAY

Oregon's Foremost Church Leader
Impressed With Possibilities--
Building Up Church

Charles Scadding, Bishop of Oregon, who is now on Coos Bay and is making a tour of the State, is a firm believer in the future of Oregon.

Speaking of the strong tendency to centralize most of the religious, social and industrial energy of the State in Portland, Bishop Scadding said he knows only the diocese of Oregon and his efforts will be devoted to all parts of the great State alike. While his headquarters will necessarily be located at Portland, yet he hopes to work personally with churches in every nook and corner of the State and no remote section will be so far away as not to receive every attention from the head of the church.

He has come to Oregon to join in the development and upbuilding of the State and as churchman and citizen will be found fighting her battles and telling the wondrous story of the west.

Bishop Scadding said he was deeply impressed by the vastness of the diocese and the magnificent opportunities for work for God which the rapidly increasing population in some places presented.

The great need of the Episcopal Church in Oregon is for clergymen of the right kind—optimistic, constructive, zealous, tactful men—and for means with which to pay them fair living stipends.

Many people expect to get in the ministry what they never look for in business, namely, a $5,000 man for less than $600 per year. The services of a Christian minister, however, could not be measured by dollars and cents, and he knew there were many clergymen making great personal sacrifices for the cause.

The Bishop expressed his regret at finding so many weak or closed missions in the diocese, and intends at the earliest opportunity to strengthen these, just so soon as they show readiness to be strengthened and bear their share of a missionary's support.

Without formulating any definite plan, he desired to be considered as much the bishop of Eastern Oregon as of Southern and Western Oregon, and is pleased with the loyalty and spirit of the people of Marshfield. He believes in a splendid future for the Coos Bay country, and hopes the church people will keep pace with its material prosperity by supporting the preachers and missions with which they are connected.

Oregon is no longer a missionary jurisdiction of the Episcopal Church, but a regularly constituted diocese and as such must become more and more self-supporting.

He believes it would be a conservation of energy, and proper, to combine some of the missions and serve them from some strong center; and his present policy is to "strengthen the stakes before lengthening the cords."

DIGGING CANAL AT TEN MILE

L. J. Simpson and Others Will Improve Mode of Transportation--Fishing Parties

L. J. Simpson and others have a donkey engine at work near the Lake creamery cleaning out the logs and stumps from the lake, after which the engine will be mounted on a scow and rigged to do dredging. The little channel between North Lake and Ten Mile is to be deepened and to enable boats to travel between the lakes at any stage of the tide. The channel is to be dredged for about half a mile.

It is important that the two lakes be connected, as a great deal of milk is gathered up from the farmers along the edges of both lakes, which work is done in gasoline launches.

Several fishing parties are now fishing at Ten Mile. Deer are said to be plentiful in this territory at the present.

TEACHERS TO HAVE GOOD MEETING

Coming Convention At Salem Will Be Attended By Prominent Persons--Strong Program

Salem.—Never in the history of the Oregon State Teachers' Association has a convention attracted so much attention or a program contained so many prominent names as that which will be held in Salem, Monday, Tuesday any Wednesday of the first week in July. Added to the state convention are the annual convention of the county superintendents and the annual institute of Marion, Polk and Linn counties, making the attendance unusually large. In the specific study and general departmental work it is doubtful if the ground will ever have been so carefully covered or so intelligently presented.

The two educators of national reputation, William E. Chancellor, superintendent of the Washington, D. C. city schools, and L. D. Stout, superintendent of the Stout Manual Training School of Menomonie, Wis., have been secured to deliver lectures which are seldom heard in western state conventions, and their presence at the meeting of itself has been a power of attraction.

Four state superintendents will be in attendance and will deliver addresses during the convention, being Miss Belle Chamberlain, of Idaho, W. E. Harmon, of Montana, H. R. Dewey, of Washington and J. H. Ackerman of Oregon. Practically all of the college presidents of the state will attend the sessions.

The officers of the association are: President, Alpha L. Dimick, principal of the Brooklyn school of Portland; first vice-president, R. E. Robinson; second vice-president, W. W. Wiley; secretary, George W. Jones, and treasurer, Caroline A. Barnes. The executive committee, in addition to Miss Dimick, is composed of the following: J. H. Ackerman, Frank Rigler, city superintendent of schools, Portland; J. M. Powers, city superintendent of schools, Salem, and P. L. Campbell, president University of Oregon, Eugene.

After the general sessions the convention will be thrown into sectional meetings which will include the department of superintendence and county superintendent's departments, secondary and higher education section, primary section and music department. The music feature will be one of the interesting sections of the convention. Music will be interspersed in generous quantity throughout the entire program, and will be under the direction of Drs. Heritage and Von Jessen of Willamette University of Salem.
