KELLY KILLED ON R. R. TRACK

south of Marshfield at 6 o'clock Friday night.

James Boone, engineer on the train which killed Kelly, was next called. He was unable to give any information further than the fact that he had been signaled to stop by the brakeman who was on the inside of the curve, and thus enabled to see the dangerous position of Kelly as the train approached. The distance from Marshfield where the accident occurred, was estimated by Boone to be six miles. Mr. Boone thought the train was running about 25 miles an hour.

Charles Bradbury was called next, and had seen the deceased Friday afternoon at the log dump a few miles out of town. He looked about the dump and spoke to nobody. Was not acting unnatural.

Some of the trainmen on other trains were seen and questioned regarding what they knew of the man's wanderings. Wm. Cox, engineer on No. 5, met Kelly as his train was coming from the south at Bridge 6, and Kelly just got out of reach as the engine passed him. Wm. McClure, fireman on No. 2, saw Kelly at Bridge 8 and this train came near catching him. The crew of No. 4 saw him as far out as the 12-mile post, and the pilot brushed his clothing as he stepped from the track. The trainmen were frightened all along the route by the careless way Kelly was traveling, and upon comparing notes, all agreed they had nearly caught him.

The body is being embalmed by T. J. Lewis at the Johnson undertaking rooms and will be shipped on the Alliance this afternoon for Minneapolis for burial.

The inquest was dismissed until 7:30 in the evening here, to allow other witnesses to be called.

The evening session was not convened until 8:30, owing to lateness of the train which John Leneve, the head brakeman, was aboard. Leneve was the first witness. His testimony was as follows:

"Age 21; was head brakeman on No. 3 Saturday morning. This was the first train out in the morning, and the trainmen were keeping sharp watch to see that there were no logs on the track. Train was running about twenty miles an hour. I was standing on the engineer's side between the curve opposite the Maxwell mine. The fireman got down to attend to the fire, and I took his seat. I could see nothing on the track. Then I turned around and looked back. When I turned around again, the man stepped off the last tie of the trestle as I saw him, one foot on the tie of trestle, his head drooped. He was mud all over; looked as if he was all in. The headblock of the pilot hit him in the left side. Grabbed as pilot hit him. Crawled about two feet from where he was hit. Don't know whether he was under bridge or not. From Maxwell mine one can see 500 yards, in plenty of time to stop."

MANSFIELD IS RECOVERING.

New York, July 13.—Richard Mansfield, the actor, who has been seriously ill, in a letter to friends in this city from Sussex, England, announced that he was well on the road to recovery, but he confirmed recent statements that he would not act this year, saying he would obey physicians' orders and avoid all exertion and excitement. "I am getting on very well indeed, and hope soon to be my old self again," he said on his bond and explained to them. "I hope to be back in the in detail how he lost the bank's United States in the late autumn and I expect to be able to act next season."

STOLEN BY PICKPOCKETS.

New York, July 13.—H. J. Wilson, the messenger of the First National Bank, who disappeared several weeks ago, collecting $34,000 in checks and $1700 in cash, has appeared before representatives of the bank and the company which was threatening to have recourse to military force if necessary to meet the situation.

Wilson was induced by friends who believed in his honesty to emerge from his concealment and tell his story.

Wilson claims his collections were stolen by a pickpocket.
