THE DALTONS

Last Survivor of Gang.

Emmett Dalton is the last surviving member of the Dalton gang of outlaws, which included the three brothers, Bob, Gratton and Emmett, who first sprang into public notice in 1889 and were wiped out in 1892 at Coffeyville, Kansas, where they attempted to rob the Coffeyville National Bank. Bob Dalton had been a deputy marshal in the Indian territory, where he acquired a reputation for nerve and daring. In 1889 he was discharged from the service for accepting bribes from criminals. Accompanied by his brothers, Gratton and Emmett, he proceeded to California. They had not been there long before there was a train robbery near Attila, in which the fireman of the train was killed. The Daltons were accused and indicted. They left the state and for the next 18 months they made criminal history faster than it had been made since the days of the Younger and James boys.

The Santa Fe train robberies at Wharton and Red Rock, the Missouri Pacific robbery near Adair and the San Francisco robbery near Vinita all followed in rapid succession. Between jobs the gang hid in the Indian Territory, Kansas and Arkansas. The railroad and express companies heaped up rewards until they amounted to $25,000, but there were no captures. The Coffeyville raid was the pet scheme of Bob Dalton. He had lived there, knew the banks and was anxious to outdo the James and Younger exploits by riding boldly into the town in broad daylight and plundering both banks at one haul. The raid occurred in October, 1892. The gang rode into the town, hitched its horses in an alley and started for the banks, each man carrying a Winchester in the hollow of his arm.

Citizens Give Battle.

But the purpose of the gang was quickly realized and a cry of "Robbers in the bank" brought the citizens out in force. The defenders of the town rushed into the hardware stores and armed with rifles and guns. They stole out on the tops of buildings, in alleys and back lots, while some few stood boldly hid in the street. In the National bank Bob and Emmett Dalton had compelled the bank force to hold up its hands and had dumped $20,000 in cash into a sack. Coming to the bank window, Bob engaged in battle with the townspeople, killing one man and wounding three others.

Meanwhile there was more serious trouble for Grat Dalton at the Condon bank. The bank had a time lock which frustrated the efforts of the gang to open it. Grat swept up the cash he found lying around exchanging a few shots with the citizens until he was forced to flee. The gang hurried to the alley where their horses were tied and where they were hemmed in by citizens to such an extent that of the Dalton boys only Emmett, swifter of foot than the others, gained his horse. Emmett rode but a short distance when, to the astonishment of the citizens, he turned back to help his brother, Bob, who had been mortally wounded.

When the smoke of the battle cleared away there were eight dead men. The robbers had lost Bob and Grat Dalton, Joe Evans and John Moore, and their fifth man, Emmett Dalton, had been shot until it was thought he could not live. The citizens had lost the city marshal, a bank clerk and two merchants of the town. Several others had been severely wounded. After Emmett recovered from his wounds he was tried and sentenced to be hanged, which in Kansas means a life sentence in the penitentiary. He was but 18 years old when captured and has been confined in the penitentiary nearly 15 years. He has been spoken of at all times as a model prisoner.

C. A. SMITH EMPLOYEE TAKES BATH IN BAY

Last evening, a scow was attached to the Dispatch in order to bring over a number of workmen from the Smith mill and a load of lumber was added. When about half way to Marshfield, a stake broke off and the lumber listed. Several of the workmen came near being precipitated into the water, but only one got into the bay, an elderly man. He had never learned to swim, but kept above the water until a row boat was sent for him.

EXPLAIN ABOUT THE SILVER QUARTER DAY

Many inquiries were made at the Palm yesterday for the ice cream with the silver quarters in them. The management was thus compelled to make detailed explanations that the offer would not be open until today. There will be five dollars in silver quarters—placed in twenty of the one hundred bricks and as the lucky person get the premium their names will be placed on the mirror over the soda fountain.

COOS BAY—ITS WONDERFUL BEAUTY AND ITS MAGNIFICENT PROMISE

A Vivid Word Picture of the Many Beautiful Scenes Around the Bay and the Incomparable Advantages Enjoyed Here

Much has been said about Coos Bay and to some it might seem an exaggeration of enterprise, but the promoters of the country have grounds for their confidence. Coos Bay with her population today, will soon be the second city of the Pacific coast, and in a few years will nearly equal the present size of San Francisco.

The great Southern Pacific railroad system is determined to make a city of it and others will soon follow it up. The vast area of fine land around the bay, the rapid settling up of the interior lands, proves that in time Coos Bay will be a famous watering place. It has the best climate on this coast, which of course means the best in the United States. The situation gives it all the known advantages. There is no summer day on which the mercury passes over 83 degrees Fahrenheit, and few in the winter when it is below sixty. The surf—that beneath the bright sky and gentle breeze rolls so lazily in long miles of spovy foam—is of such excellent temperature during summer that it makes sea bathing a possibility.

One may bathe either in the surf or the still waters of the bay. The two being only a short distance apart, you find here what can be rarely found elsewhere—"A place to escape both the cold of winter and the heat of summer; where the winter sun, like the winter land, is a plaything, instead of a terror. And all this is in the center of a vast amphitheatre, where the mountain foot-hills sit as silent spectators looking down upon the mightiest of oceans"—The Pacific.

It is easily imagined what the surroundings of this rare bay will be when all is completed. The whole will be one city, one in purpose, one in pride—the City of Coos Bay.

The whole world has nowhere else such peace and comfort, such freedom from friction, such light and easy and safe ways of amusement. Not many years ago, an animal would flee in every direction from one's path; the wild duck sunned himself in many a little pond or inlet; and the sand hill crane stood upon the beach.

Though much of the wild beauty of those days has faded, much still remains for those who know where to seek it; while the ease and comfort of hunting and camping beneath the clear skies go far to compensate for whatever else may be wanting.
