COOS BAY'S CLAIM.

Mr. Peter Loggie's idea that too much can not be said to the outside Ray as a coaling station, is one which squares with common sense. It is also true that every opportunity should be seized to present Coos Bay's adaptability to such a use, through delegates to compositions of Bay's adaptability to such a use, through delegates to conventions of mational significance. Governments, so high, when there ought to be war and navy departments and military authorities do not concern themselves in particular localities until they have to and it has occurred a thousand times out of a thousand fortunate that so little attention had and one that governments, depart-ments and military authorities have awakened too late. Coos Bay has a location on the Pacific coast which makes it extremely important as a seaport, with or without coal, but in view of the great coal resources, and the fact that this coal can be loaded on ships at the mine's mouth, that importance is increased many fold. While there is no present probability of hostilities there is no security against them. Human nature is such that men and nations will fight, and it happens that coal is as important in modern warfare as explosives, There is no other coal along this coast except at Puzel Sound and if a hostile fleet should need fuel, Coos Bay is accessible to ships of sufficient milk, should come to Marshfield and size to furnish a pientiful supply to a fieet.

People here are not alarmed over the chance of war or invasion, but they know how vulnerable is the coast if struck by a hostile power at this point. It is not claimed that the fleet, and yet when a railroad is com-pleted, as it soon will be, invasion of both the Umpqua and Willamette Valleys could be easily enough effect-ed and Coos Bay coal, unprotected and ignored by the government, would play a very important part in such invasion. Mr. Loggie has been designated as a delegate to the Deep Water convention at Memphis, and if the Coos Bay citles are at all intera coaling and naval station, his excitizens.

has been converted into a large city. Its principal thoroughfare, Broad-way, has been substantially con-structed three miles long. For two miles it is paved and has concrete sidewalks. It is for that distance lined with blocks ready for the dealers. By October 1st this year enough houses will be completed to shelter 50,000 people. The modern commodations are all finished. When the $45,000,000 are invested the corportion's investment entire will be $120,000,000. This is the first great city ever built in so short a time. In the next national census this arid sand plain, will figure under the name of the city of Gary as one of the great citles of America in population and wealth. Think of it, 100,000 people will do the bidding of one great corporation, live in its houses, work for its upbuilding, sub-mit to its decrees and help to make 5 cents billionaries of millionalres. of course it will be a model city. Pull-man was. But we can not help $1 25 thinking that if the A. O. U. W. or help the Independent Order of Odd Fel-lows or some other fraternal order owned all the stock in the corporation and received all the dividends that it would be working up to a very pleasing ideal. Fraternalism Injected into the business system IMES Marshfield, Oregon, and no doubt a very acceptable municipality.

A TIMELY ROAST. That was in some ways a well merited criticism which the apple plenty of both and it costs so little to produce them in this state. He paid his respects also to the fruit growers and regarded it as very un been paid to the proper care of the orchards. Oregon is one of the most esourceful and productive states in the Union and there is no excuse for importing anything which can grown in the state. Yet the isolated position of the state and of Coos Bay also has caused the people to become carcless and to an extent indolent. It is not in the climate nor in the nature of the inhabitants and we be lieve the latter are getting into action, now that opportunity is becoming apparent. It is certainly inexplicable why a man who has three hundred acres of fertile land on which he is grazing forty or fifty cows and who is making good profits buy all his potatoes at a price per bound. Why does he not raise them himself. Worse yet the potatoes have been brought in, perhaps, from Minnesota. Why, does he go without fruit in a country so productive of apples and plums, and why are coast could be invaded by such a these fruits so scarce in the Marsh-fleet, and yet when a railroad is com-field market? Why are eggs and high and chickens held at butter prohibitive prices? Simply because the Coos Bay farmer has not really North Bend, anticipated the market which has grown up within his reach and is in-clined to doubt its continuance because he has cultivated the habit of doubting. All that is needed now is to throw all doubts to the winds and go to work on the theory that ested in the proposition to make this the progressive prosperity which afshould be defrayed by the stay. It has.
