 ALLEGANY NOTES. *****

Allegany, Oregon, August 23.— Mrs. Ncah passed through an experience last Wednesday that might have proven fatal. She was driving, with a babe about seventeen months old in her arm, up Price hill, when the team came abreast a cable stretched across the road. She was about to alight and lift the babe when it began to move up, throwing the horses back up on the buggy, then the buggy against the bank on the roadside. The horses were frightened and ran away, but were caught on Marlow creek bridge by Isaac Sawyer, who ran down a trail. The cable was being used by Clarence Gould who was bringing an engine up the hill side. The tongue and one single-tree were broken on the wagon. Mrs. Ncah says she does not know how she and the child managed to escape injury.

Clarence Gould had taken his large engine nearly to the top of the hill in the logging woods when one of the stay cables loosened and the machine started downward, breaking the cables. The machine went about twice its length and capsized. Clarence was bringing the small engine to help in righting the overturned engine.

J. R. Burch and family and Noah Folk came to Allegany Tuesday evening with a prairie schooner ready to start on an overland trip to Josephine county.

Mrs. Peterson and children of East Marshfield returned home Friday from a visit to Mrs. Peterson's brother, Joe Larson, above the Golden Falls.

 MYRTLE POINT NEWS. *****

Growers of any kind of fruit, such as apples, pears, plums, etc., and bringing them in closed boxes to any market, home or for shipment, should not overlook the Perkins Act, which law compels each and every box or crate of fruit offered for sale to be plainly marked with the grower's or packer's name. Packers, not growers, must add to their names the postoffice address of their respective business places. Farmers, have you ever thought that the most of you are some of the greatest violators of the law? You could be made to pay more fines than the scattering law-breakers selling whisky. The dairy laws are very plain but strict. All refuse, that is to say the droppings of animals kept in the barns, must daily be cleaned out and such refuse not to be left outside the barn to accumulate and decompose but must be removed not less than one hundred feet from such barn, thereby securing purity of milk. Each cow barn and stands must be whitewashed twice a year. The fine for omitting to perform such is fifty dollars for the first offense.

The county would have a rich harvest of money by enforcing the law and this should be and will be done when the dairy inspector takes hold. Accept a warning in time.

The use of electricity for the forcing of all kinds of vegetables to a much earlier maturity has been practiced for many years and is nothing new.

By the use of electric lights during a part of the night you force the growth of plants from seedling to its ripening just one-third.

Myrtlewood should not be wantonly destroyed. It will yet be a large item of exportation.

Mr. Frank Allen, a New York capitalist, has bought all the myrtle lumber sawed by Mr. Buckman, an Arizona lumber man. Mr. Allen has built a large shed above the town and also is doing work at the Mast Hardwood Furniture factory. Mr. Wm. Ditty, his assistant, packed quite a lot of the lumber for shipment to the east.

Our postmaster, Mr. August Bender, has resigned. It is expected that Mr. H. B. Steward, prominent as a strawberry grower, and at present assistant postmaster, will be appointed.

NEWS OF NORTH BEND.

A crowd of young people went up Haines Inlet to the Peterson ranch on Friday night. They took along with them plenty of good things to eat, including a sack of watermelons. They also took along a case of soda water, at least that is the way it was labeled. They spent the evening in dancing, singing and feasting. They returned early Saturday morning a little tired and sleepy, but united in saying that they had a most enjoyable time. The Petersons certainly know how to entertain. Mr. Douglas, the North Bend photographer, was the organizer and conductor of the excursion.

Chamber of Commerce Held No Meeting.

The North Bend Chamber of Commerce held no meeting Friday night. The room in the Myers block, which they have been using for a meeting place, is now being altered to accommodate the Miller-Cleaver Business College which will be opened here next month. It seems that no arrangements had been made for a different meeting place. Arrangements, however, have since been made to hold the meetings hereafter in the city hall.

The steamship Coaster left the North Bend wharf this morning with about 500,000 feet of ties for the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. The ties will be delivered at Oakland, California. They were sawed by the North Bend Lumber Company's new mill.

 EGGS HATCH SEA GULLS *****

 Story of Incubator and Its *****

 Surprising Product. *****

Some time ago, before Jack Flanagan left for Curry county on his hunting trip, his many friends were much worried at his very peculiar actions. It was not an uncommon sight to see him walking dejectedly down the street, apparently oblivious to all surroundings, and scarcely responding to the cheery howdy of his multitude of old-time pals and life-long acquaintances. He was at times seen in earnest conversation with Dr. Straw and Ivy Condon, but nothing definite could be obtained from either gentleman, and at last the gloom seemed to settle upon every one. Suddenly the clouds were lifted and Jack appeared upon our streets as cheery and genial as ever, but no information could be obtained. When finally, through roundabout channels the story was consummated, and here it is.

When Gow Why's last baby was born, Dr. Straw was the attending physician. The baby was very delicate, and to save the little one's life Dr. Straw wired the Chutes in San Francisco to forward at once a baby incubator. It's wholesome effect upon the little one is apparent today to all who have seen Gow's rolly-polly, husky little boy. Of course the incubator fell into disuse and was placed in stock by Gow. One night this summer, while the doctor and Ivy were returning from council meeting, Ivy complained to the Doctor of the scarcity of spring chickens.

When, like a flash, Dr. Straw proposed that they raise their own chickens, saying: "We can borrow Gow's baby incubator and with the addition of an egg-tray it will work as good as any." Gow was consulted and gladly made the loan. The machine was at once removed to the Doctor's residence and placed in his back yard. So far so good. The necessary egg-tray was substituted for the little woolen baby blankets, and the gun was ready to load. Deciding the best was none too good, Jack Flanagan was consulted, and the Luther Burbank of the poultry world of Plat B sold them a setting of his new breed of chix, called the "Sigma Chi Duckwings," and the engine was started. One morning, about three weeks later, Mrs. Straw heard the plaintive pip of the new born, and rushing in she excitedly told the Doctor of the success of the incubator. The Doctor phoned Ivy, and it was with great gusto and glee, they opened the drawer and there was the first little product. Before the day was done, every egg had hatched, and Ivy and the Doctor kept various swinging doors on the turn all afternoon and evening. The little ones thrived, but their make-up seemed all to run to Bill. As they grew larger and their bills developed, the Doctor became alarmed and took Jack up to see them. It was a new one on Jack. And the cause of his deep abstraction was trying to figure out the reason. He was about to give it up, when, one morning he happened to run across one of Frank Waite's and Major Kinney's pet sea gulls laying an egg in a Sigma Chi nest.

The mystery was at last solved, and gathering a new sitting of his Oklahoma Reds he hurriedly came to town and explained all to the Doctor and Ivy. Frank Waite hitched up his team and hauled back to Plat B the motherless gulls, where he and the Major are acting as foster parents to them. The machine was once more loaded and the Doctor and Ivy are living in anticipation of winter evenings spent eating their fall springers. Truly, a happy ending.

MAJOR KINNEY WILL HAVE OPERATION

Major L. D. Kinney, who was down from Plat B yesterday was seen by a Times reporter and questioned regarding his going to a hospital for an operation. The Major said he would not submit to any operation until he was out of debt for he desired that any sympathy arising from such a contingency should be genuine and not out of anxiety over a possibility of losing standing accounts. Mr. Kinney has been troubled with a malady which has been diagnosed as necrosis of the sternum and his physician says an operation is necessary for its relief.

PEACHES ARE IN THE LOCAL MARKET

Peaches arrived on the Breakwater and are selling higher than was expected. The Crawford crop is about finished and the next in line will be Muirs which will be in market within a few days. Scarcity and heavy rains which prevented picking, are causes which have raised the prices.

ALLIANCE WILL SAIL FOR BAY ON SATURDAY

Portland, Aug. 27.—Staunch and seaworthy as ever the steamer Alliance, which was rammed by the City of Panama and badly damaged, will go out on her regular run between Portland and Coos Bay Saturday night. She will be floated from the drydock Thursday and come up to Portland to begin loading for the outward trip. The bottom of her hull is not so badly damaged as at first feared. Timbers were sprung but not sufficient to cause a leak. Mechanics will be employed on her day and night until she is in shape for placing in the water.

The Alliance was disabled on the morning of August 8. By sailing Saturday she will have been out of commission just three weeks, a longer period than was anticipated after the first hasty inspection of her had been completed. For a distance of seven feet her entire stern was wrecked, besides she sustained other damages. Those looking over the craft since the work of repairing has begun to near completion say she will be in as fine shape as ever.

WILL INSTALL SMITH COMPANY MACHINERY

Mr. Bennett, chief engineer of the C. A. Smith Lumber company, of Minneapolis, arrived here yesterday and will direct the installation of the machinery in the new Smith mill on Isthmus Inlet.

ELECTRIC COMPANY MAKES IMPROVEMENTS

The Coos Bay Gas and Electric company received a 100 horse power boiler on the Breakwater. This boiler will be installed immediately as an auxiliary to the present Marshfield plant which has been worked to its full capacity of late. The company also placed at the corner of C and First streets a 200 light transformer for which the company has the thanks of this office.

PORTLAND MAN LOOKS FOR BUSINESS OPENING

Mr. S. S. Jennings and family, of Portland, are in the city and intend to remain permanently in case they can find a suitable residence and a business place. Mr. Jennings intends opening a dry goods establishment.

Coos County Peaches.

Who says Coos county can't grow peaches? T. M. Hermann of the South Fork brought one to this office Wednesday that measured 8 3/4 inches in circumference. It was of the Early Crawford variety and hard to beat for its fine flavor. —Myrtle Point Enterprise.
