BANDON NOTES.

Bandon, Sept. 26.
The schooner Oregoa left today with 400,000 feet of lumber from Prosper for San Francisco; the Advance arrived last night in ballast and is loading lumber at Aberdeen mill.

The Bandon Investment Company is preparing the plat and survey of Sweeney & Walker's Addition to Bandon. This is the old Clar's Woolen Mill tract and will make a valuable adjunct to the city, being level and very close in. The owners, Messrs. Sweeney and Walker, are preparing a booklet to advertise Coos County, Bandon and their property, and for this purpose have had a party of photographers out for several days taking views.

Walter Nelson has sold his saloon here to John Marsden, who will run it in connection with his newly established wholesale house.

FLOODS IN SPAIN CLAIM MANY VICTIMS

Wine Crop of Famous Andalusia Valley Has Been Totally Destroyed.

Madrid, Sept. 27.—The government today announced the wine crop in the valley of Andalusia had been ruined by floods. The official figures placed the number of flood victims at 72 drowned and 68 injured. Malaga, Sept. 27.—The inundation and suspension of rescue work in the picturesque valleys covered with water. The city is without gas or electricity. The bodies of about one hundred drowned persons have been recovered in this vicinity.

KILLED IN AUTO RACE.

Car Crashes Through Fence and Into Spectators.

New York, Sept. 28.—In the first accident of any consequence in the twenty-four hours endurance automobile contest at the Morris Park track, one man was killed, two fatally injured and a score of others more or less bruised. One of the cars, while going over sixty miles an hour, crashed through a fence at the western turn of the track in the 13th hour of the race. The driver of the car was struck by a heavy timber and thrown from his machine. When picked up, it was found his skull was fractured and he died at the hospital.

CANALS AND BATTLESHIPS.

A Worry Lest the Panama Canal Locks Are Too Small.

The locks as planned for the Panama canal are 100 feet wide. The two new battleships will have a beam of 88 feet. That would leave seven and one-half feet in the clear on each side of one of those ships in passing the locks. Evidently that is too small for such a ship proceeding under its own steam or being towed, but the ships could doubtless be handled safely by special devices. But it is pointed out that, while the draft of twenty-seven or twenty-eight feet cannot well be increased without shutting the ships out of most harbors in the world, the width is steadily increasing and nobody can foretell what it may ultimately reach. Consequently the question is arising whether we shall increase the width of the locks or plan to stop increasing the beam of the battleships.

Probably we need do neither. We can build a sufficient number of these marine monsters on both sides of the continent, and if occasions for transfer ever arise we can wait for them to go round Cape Horn. The remarkable thing, however, is that while all the world is crying for universal peace each nation should be increasing the destructiveness of its engines of war, and that even in the construction of an isthmian canal we should be supposed to govern ourselves rather by the possible requirements of war than of those of peaceful commerce.

Doubtless the jingo spirit was powerfully invoked to spur up the American people to undertake this great work, but after all what the canal was built for was to accommodate commerce. In all respects the plans are ample for that purpose. Possibly we shall do well enough to step there if the alterations of the plans should involve large additional expense, even if it compels mankind to fight each other with ships not much wider than a couple of forty-foot streets.—San Francisco Chronicle.

On College Smugness.

(By Styx.)

Here we are again at the threshold of the silly season—the time of the year when the equinoctial changes in dress are to be wrought; when the bulldog pipe may be seen striding across the campus with a stalwart youth in tow and a whirlwind of smoke on the forward quarter; when style spreads its mantle of corduroy over every blossoming graduate of the college fashion book and drapes the tricks that have been used to conceal questionable marks from father since colleges were in long clothes—aye, these are the days when style is "Oil Kerrect."

It's quite an art to coach one's self in climbing the steps of knowledge—knowledge of how to dress to make the neophytes green with envy or inexperience. There are many rudiments that must be mastered before one need expect to obtain an estate among the favored fortunates. Don't rush in where angels fear to tread. You must have a certain standing in college that entitles you to a ticket to the dunce cap gallery. The secret—of course this information is strictly confidential—the secret is in making good with the haberdashers, and incidentally with the "old man."

After you once get there it's a "dash." Diogenes failed to acquire a knowledge of the principles of college learning and therefore trod the streets of Athens barefooted carrying a searchlight. This is merely speculation, it must be confessed, as there is a possibility that his method of dress was good form those days. Nevertheless you don't need to have vado mecum—your style book—with you after you have elevated yourself to the first stellar attachment and don't squirm every time you behold transfiguration in the mirror.

There are many gradations in a college man's training for a football game—of course this relates only to the spectator who wants prominent mention on the sidelines. However, it's the essentials that count, and one may be considered in good standing if one sticks closely to a few established rules. You can be transformed into a Sport Hix while you wait. Sartorial ethics require that you wear reversed duncecap trousers. They're the latest, but don't forget to reef them. Turn up the brim of your near-brimless lid; flash a "stone;" wear checkerboard hosiery—it's etiquette.

These recommendations are to be followed of course only in extreme cases. The campus is not peopled entirely with the smug, up-to-date "stades"—nevertheless they are a force. The president of a Western university recently suggested that copies of the college magazines, the cover design of which represented the "typical" collegian, be withheld from the high schools, for obvious reasons.

The diletante who is proclaimed by his wearing apparel is a factor, yet he is usually not of the college. He doesn't represent the ideals, of the institution. He's a walking advertisement for a "correct" clothing house.

The Bubonic Plague.

San Francisco, which objected to the interference of the federal government in the school question, is glad to remember that it is a part of the United States when the danger of the plague threatens. Only the nation can exercise sufficient authority and command sufficient resources to stamp out the plague. The commerce of San Francisco with the orient has increased so rapidly during the last ten years that the opportunities for the plague to reach the city have been multiplied many times, while the general disturbance of the life of the city caused by the earthquake has made it easier for the plague to seize a foothold.

The way in which it is propagated is a matter of some dispute. Certain authorities believe it is disseminated by the rat, just as yellow fever is disseminated by the mosquito. Hence a general attempt to kill the rats is one of the first effects of the discovery of the plague. Other authorities draw from their experiences the conclusion that it is a dust disease. It has been observed that a person with unbroken skin may handle the body of a victim of the plague, may eat from the same dish, or sleep in the same bed without catching the disease, but a tiny scratch on the hand or the face affording a momentary lodging to the dust of the street will admit the poison into the system.

If the latter theory is the correct one quarantine is almost useless when the disease has entered the city. In San Francisco, which always has been famous for its dust and where since the earthquake the earth is constantly being dug up, overturned, and blown in clouds about the city, the danger is great and can be met only by rigorous measures. The United States government will act at once. Only the federal authority can exercise an adequate supervision over vessels entering the Golden Gate to prevent a worse calamity than the earthquake destroying the reviving prosperity of the city of San Francisco.—Chicago Tribune.

District Fair For Coos.

(Myrtle Point Enterprise.)

R. C. Dement, a member of the board of directors of the district fair association, has just returned from Roseburg where he attended the annual exhibition of the association, which was fairly well attended and very successful in several particulars. There was a fine exhibit of horses and some of the other stock shown was very excellent. Coos county was not in on the exhibits to any large extent. A few races horses from this side were entered and one made a winning. The fruit shown was very good, and the vine vegetables were excellent but on other crops Coos county could make a much better display. Mr. Dement presented this county as the place for holding the next fair, and it was generally conceded that we are entitled to it. Eugene wants it again, however, and if Coos county desires it to be held with the county fair at Arago next year it will have to make a showing to get it. It can be secured for Coos but without an effort. Such an effort will undoubtedly be made, and promises success. Coos county held successful fairs 18 or 20 years ago, and can do much better now, which should be shown at the Arago fair next week.

TO BUILD LINE IN NEW MEXICO

Rock Island Company to Have New Route For Its Traffic.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—It is now stated that the Rock Island has not abandoned its plans for constructing a cut-off from Amarillo and Tucuman, N. M., as was at one time reported. It is announced that rails have been ordered and that track laying will be begun by the end of the present year. The old grade is in good condition, but will require resurfacing in spots. The cut-off will be 110 miles in length. It will run in almost a straight line between these two points named. At Tucuman the line will connect with the El Paso division of the Rock Island. In reality the new line will be an extension of the Choctaw, Oklahoma and Gulf. It will afford a new Southern route for traffic from western points to Memphis and other points in the east reached by the Choctaw line and its connections.

Bay Park

Offers an opportunity for you to secure a site for a good home of your own.

We do not believe that you will ever again be offered property of equal value at such low prices on Coos Bay.

The easy terms, too, are a great advantage to those who are not able to buy where they have to pay all cash.

$10.00 will make your first payment on a lot.

$5.00 a month thereafter will be all you will be asked to pay on each lot. This is merely the amount of money most of us spend foolishly. Why not make it work for you and bring you more?
