George Brown of New Era will harvest 8,000 bushels of potatoes.

Red foxes are becoming numerous on the red hills west of Newberg.

A wholesale paper house has been incorporated in La Grande; a meat-packing plant is talked of.

A Douglas county young man named Plaster was married last week. It is hoped he will always stick to his wife.

Polk county's prune crop for 1907 is estimated at 1,875,000 pounds, being an increase of 625,000 pounds over the 1906 crop, and it will return to the growers $47,000 more than they received last year.

Gold Beach, says the Globe, is threatened with a wood famine this winter; not because there is a scarcity of available timber, but because those that would cut it can't, and those that could won't, because their pockets are already full of money.

DOOD

Dairy correspondence of Klamath Falls Express: Farmers have begun to harvest their potatoes, and they find they have a great crop. One farmer found that one of his potatoes weighed 7½ pounds, another 5½ and several others as much as 4½ pounds and he hasn't finished digging yet.

E. E. Robbins of Amity threshed 1,039 pounds of No. 1 clover seed from 2 1-5 acres of his farm, making 8½ bushels per acre, a return of $107.80 per acre. In addition the land furnished the best of green pasture during the spring and early summer. Mr. Luppe of Bridwell station threshed five acres of Alsike clover, which made 16 bushels to the acre, making an income of $91.20 off each acre.

Forest Grove Times: E. L. Naylor has shipped 2,241 pounds of mohair to Lowell, Massachusetts. This is believed to be the largest amount of mohair ever shipped by a breeder from this state and is of very fine quality. Tags were put in a number of fleeces in order that a full report may be given by the factory. The mohair is baled in a hop press and is first covered with house lining and then with hop cloth, being wired with three strong wires around each bale.

Mr. H. F. Meachen, of the government service, arrived in Marshfield Thursday from the south; having come up the coast from Cape Blanco, where he has been engaged in installing a wireless station for the government. Mr. Meachen spent two months in the actual work of erecting the station, but it took six months to get the station into working order. He says that the Cape Blanco station makes the service on the Pacific coast complete all the way from Alaska to the southern part of California. These are the following wireless stations which are in constant communication: Sitka, North Head, Wn., Blanco, Table Bluff, Yerba Buena, Mare Island, Pt. Agulias, Pt. Loma. Mr. Meachen left for Mare Island on the plant yesterday, and his four years' service will expire upon his arrival at the naval station. He is yet uncertain what he will follow when he reaches California and is given his discharge, though he has an offer to take up the wireless work with the Massie company of Rhode Island.

A New Invention.
(Coquille Herald.)

H. C. Graves was in town the first of the week with the model of his centrifugal separator, having returned from the coast where he had given it a thorough test on some of Coos county's black sands and the gentleman is most highly elated over the success indicated by the trial he gave it. Below we give a certificate by a gentleman who assisted in the test:

Denmark, Curry County, Oregon, Sept. 10, 1907.

To whom it may concern: This certifies that I assisted Mr. H. C. Graves in testing his centrifugal separator on the black sands of the Butler mine, using power from my creamery for the purpose. I examined many samples, both of natural sand and tailings carefully counting the colors with a glass after being panned. Fully 90 per cent of all visible colors were saved which I regard as remarkable for the gold is very fine, the sand heavy and the water muddy from continuous use.

This machine is very different from anything we have seen in this line of machinery. It works on the centrifugal principle, not unlike a cream separator. One great feature in this machine is that the same water can be worked over and over, thus making it possible to use it
