REHABILITATION OF SAN FRANCISCO

Figures Show Population of Bay Cities Has Increased 75,000 Since Earthquake.

San Francisco, Oct. 24.—Eighteen months after the fire, San Francisco looks back over a splendid achievement, in the stupendous task of rehabilitating her business section. Some idea of the enormity of the work may be conceived when it is stated that approximately $136,000,000 in cash has been spent for this purpose. Applications for buildings are estimated to have reached $100,000,000, representing the construction of 11,000 new permanent buildings, seven thousand of which have been completed. A fact worthy of note is that of the amount mentioned above as having been spent in rehabilitation, $56,410,000, as is estimated, was paid to labor. This prosperity of the workmen and the retailers is reflected in the bank clearings and the deposits in the savings banks. The clearings since the fire have crept up past the $2,500,000,000 mark.

As conditions assume normal aspects again thousands of business men and their families who have been temporarily located in the neighboring cities about the bay and down the peninsula are moving back to San Francisco, it being estimated that during the past year some 14,000 former residents have returned to the metropolis. The disaster tightened the bonds uniting the bay cities, however, in every way, and the business interests of the entire region fronting San Francisco bay are appreciating the interdependence which exists commercially. Data secured by The California Promotion Committee exists commercially. Data secured by the ferry companies shows that from the month of September more than 2,250,000 passengers were transported across the bay, an average of upwards of 50,000 daily each way.

A study of the estimates of population is a convincing argument in support of the statement that prosperity reigns. San Francisco's population at the beginning of 1906, three and one-half months before the fire, was conservatively estimated at 500,000, and adding 135,000 as the combined population of the bay cities, Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda, made a total population for the San Francisco bay region of 635,000. Careful computations and estimates based on figures furnished by the water company and by the post office officials, place the present population of this city at 450,000, while the combined population of the bay cities mentioned above has increased 260,000, a grand total of 710,000, or a gain in population for the region of 75,000.

Conditions in the labor unions are normal as regards wages and there are no disputes whatever pending. This condition, supplemented by the return to normal of prices of building materials and the prospect of greater facilities for shippers in the handling of freight, insures a vigorous pursuance of the reconstruction work.

To state the situation in a nutshell, it may be said that one-third of the burned district has been rebuilt and that the remaining two-thirds will be covered within the next three years. Rather than setting the city back, as predicted, the disaster will leave San Francisco, on its fifth anniversary, a greater and better city than it was before.

UNION IRON WORKS WILL NOT BE CLOSED

Schwab Relieves San Francisco by Promising to Spend Million Instead.

San Francisco, Oct. 24.—Charles M. Schwab addressed a large gathering of the most influential men of San Francisco at noon today in the board room of the Merchants' Exchange. His subject was "San Francisco's Industrial Situation and Her Commercial Future."

Most important of the direct statements made by Schwab was that, after looking the ground over carefully, he decided not only to continue the Union Iron Works, but to modernize that shipbuilding and structural plant at a cost of $1,000,000 or more and to enlarge its capacity. This announcement threw his audience into a turmoil of handclapping and cheers.

Mr. Schwab declared that the conditions of industrial warfare existing in San Francisco cannot survive; that the unusual and abnormal scale of prices of labor imposed by the union upon capital in this city must fall; that confidence as between themselves and in the integrity of the courts must be restored among the people of San Francisco; that he is not an enemy of organized labor, but is opposed to the way in which labor unions are administered today; that "San Francisco cannot help succeeding," and that this city has before it a future greater in industry and commerce and economic achievements than in the past.

After his address Mr. Schwab, in reply to a question, asked the Associated Press to make for him the following statement:

"My recent criticisms regarding Nevada have been misunderstood. I have not criticized and do not criticize the citizens of that state. My criticisms were directed solely against the men who have brought the mines of Nevada to New York."

"My son tells me you've discharged him," said the office boy's mother, "and I think that's strange. You advertised for a strong boy, and he's certainly—"

"He's too strong, madam," interrupted the employer. "In the single day he was here he broke all the rules of this office and some of the furniture."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Widow Returns.

Much sympathy is expressed up and down the Coquille river, over the sudden and untimely death of Carl Rogers, engineer on the government works at Bandon, whose death was chronicled in yesterday's Times. He had been married the previous Saturday before being stricken with paralysis on Monday. He had felt in usual health except for a slight, occasional headache which he had noticed for about a month. On Monday, he was not feeling well in the morning and concluded to stay at home and do a little work about the house. His illness seized him that morning, and he died the next day. He had provided a home and furnishings and with his bride was about to take up the joys of a happy American home. Mrs. Rogers was formerly Miss Vega Anderson, and at one time spent several months in this vicinity. Her home is in Coquille and she returned there yesterday to live with her parents, a widow with happiness snatched from her almost before she had realized it.

New York, Oct. 24.—W. J. Bryan delivered three addresses in New York today, the final one being before a large audience at the Cooper Union. The subject of his ending address was "Democracy Today." Bryan was enthusiastically received by his auditors and his remarks were frequently interrupted by applause. During the day he addressed the students of the Clinton high school and the striking telegraphers.
