WE GIVE PREMIUMS

POWERFUL SAVINGS IN

Ladies' Winter Suits

Reductions like these for such high grade garments were never heard of so early in the season. But we are determined to keep the store record of this month up with that of a year ago, and this is the cause of the deep cuts that are being made. There still remains a handsome assortment. But you should hurry.

American Lady Corsets

VALUES UP TO $3.25 ONLY $1.65

There are several models of our American Lady Corsets which we wish to discontinue. To do so hurriedly, we have assembled all of them in one lot, and placed a price on them that is much below the wholesale cost.

Among the lot are $2, $2.25, $3 and $3.25 values, in low and high busts, long and short hips, with side and front supporters. All of these models are new and good, and were it not that the manufacturers discontinued making them, and have other numbers to take their place, they could never be purchased at this figure. Although there are about 100 of these corsets, we would urge that you hurry, as they will undoubtedly be picked up promptly. Regular $2.00 to $3.25 values, choice only $1.65

Pawnbroker Has Fine Jewels

Paris, Nov. 9.—The extravagant Sultan of Morocco recently pawned his jewels in this city to raise needed money. The Sultan's financial position is growing more difficult. The German loan of $2,500,000, made in September, 1905, and the French loan of $400,000 were both guaranteed by the Sultan's landed and other property. Apparently it was impossible for the Moors to pay the loans, and the Sultan raised money on his jewels.

It is not surprising that Abdul Aziz needs money. He was educated as a spendthrift, and the story of his extravagance since he came to the throne reads like a chapter from the Arabian Nights. When he became Sultan he was anxious to improve the country, but he was weak and young, and his advisers started him on the road to bankruptcy.

He was encouraged to order useless and costly things from Europe, and told that it gave satisfaction to the Government of the various countries when he made purchases in their markets. Photography interested him, and he ordered a camera of solid gold, at a cost of $10,000, from London. He ordered $2,000 worth of sensitized paper from Paris at one time. In a single year he spent nearly $35,000 on his photographic fad alone.

Of course, his Moorish agents who executed his commissions robbed him right and left. Abdul Aziz ordered a steam yacht because King Edward had one. Fez lies many miles from the sea, but the yacht was built and eventually arrived at a coast port. The Sultan paid for the yacht, and it was eventually sold for scrap iron. Fez was soon filled with expensive rubbish.

A dozen motor cars were bought and thrown aside, a state coach, constructed at enormous expense, was brought to the capital, and after Abdul Aziz made one short journey—seated on the coachman's box—it was relegated to the dust-heap. The Sultan purchased bicycles, cinematograph machines, typewriters, telephones, only to throw them aside after a superficial inspection. He paid fabulous prices for everything.

Two years ago, when Abdul Aziz felt that his throne was unsafe, he decided to convert part of his capital into jewels, so that they might be easily carried in the event of his sudden flight from Fez. A messenger was sent to Paris to purchase nearly $2,500,000 worth of unset diamonds. The Sultan is said to have carried these gems about his person constantly, and they doubtless form at least a portion of the jewels which Mohammed Ettazzi and Dr. Verdon are now taking to Paris to pawn.

ELMER A. TODD, O'Connell Bldg., Marshfield

Strictly speaking, there are no official Moroccan crown jewels. The Sultan was actually induced to have a crown made several years ago at a cost, it is said, of nearly $1,000,000, but his religion forbids him to wear it, as he must not put gold or jewels on his head. The German loan of $2,500,000 raised two years ago, which is now falling due, was put to some ludicrous uses. When the first installment was paid the Sultan spent $3,000 on importing a party of Egyptian dancers to Fez.
