BANDON NOTES

Bandon, Nov. 11.—Dr. Mann, of Langlois, is a caller in Bandon for a couple of days.

Miss Ethel Timmons left Saturday for a short visit with friends in Curry county.

An attempt to burglarize the residence of P. A. Jamieson was frustrated Saturday night. The parties believed to be a man and a woman escaped and have not been apprehended although Chief of Police Gardiner claims to have clues that will probably lead to their detention.

Estimates of Bandon's population as judged by the residences and the hotels' population and from the school attendance place it at about 2500. This is regarded as very conservative by many of the radically optimistic.

The deputy inspector of fish canneries was a visitor here Saturday investigating conditions in the Timmons Cannery. He announces everything to be in excellent shape.

The entertainment given by E. M. Rose and his troupe in the opera hall Saturday was good and well attended.

Elmer D. Hufford has purchased a valuable piece of suburban property and commenced a residence building upon it.

The steamer Favorite ran aground on the flat just above town Saturday morning and waited for tide to take her off. The Liberty made the trip in her place.

Miss Claine Walker expects to leave soon for California where she will spend the winter.

Bandon, Nov. 12.—Captain Willard has resigned from his position on the steamer Favorite. He is having a new gasoline launch built at Timmerman's yards on the Bay, which will be the largest of its kind this side of the Sound, being 65 feet long with 6 feet 5 inches beam; he will put it on the Coquille-Bandon route and take the command himself.

George Mannett shot six wild geese out of a flock of seven that lighted within a half-mile of town yesterday.

John Blank was arrested Sunday night at Prosper on a charge of stealing carpenters' tools in Bandon, and he now languishes in the city jail waiting for holidays to cease.

The Christian Church Sunday School basket social last night was a decided success, and netted them considerable finance.

The city is full of people and it is almost impossible to supply strangers with rooms. Last night several drummers occupied blankets on office floors, and families are living in factory lofts and in tents while lumber orders cannot be filled to supply the building going on.

—Masquerade Ball, at Sumner, November 33. Good music.

To Whom It May Concern: I will not be responsible for any bills contracted by Mrs. George Elliott. GEORGE ELLIOTT.

Annual Bazaar and Supper. —The Annual Bazaar of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian church which has been announced for Wednesday, November 20th, will be held in the new attractive O'Connell building. In addition to the bazaar, the ladies will serve a chicken supper following their usual custom, which announcement will please the men folk quite as much as the women. Remember the date and place.

The lectures were well attended and various views were taken of the subjects by those attending.

Boise, Ida., Nov. 13.—H. H. Glickman, a Chicago traveling man, was drowned in the plunge at the Natatorium here last night. It is believed he was stricken with heart disease while in the water. Glickman was to have been married today to Mabel Shoemaker, of Baker City, Or., who came here Saturday.

COULD NOT LIVE ON DIET OF PEANUTS

Fremont, Neb., Nov. 13.—Archie Venuto is dead as the result of an attempt to live on a peanut diet. He started the diet a week ago, and at the end of four days was completely crazy and was placed in a hospital. He refused to eat anything except peanuts and died this morning of exhaustion.

CALLING IN PARIS.

The Concierge is a Peculiar Institution in Several Ways.

You leave your card at the door of the person to whom you desire to present yourself, and there it is taken in charge by that peculiarly French functionary, the concierge, says Professor Barrett Wendell in Scribner's. At least in Paris, the greater part of French people live in large houses containing a number of apartments with a common entrance and staircase. Close to the entrance door, on the level of the street, are some stuffy little rooms inhabited by the concierge, or porter, with his family. Their duty, among other things, is to keep strict watch on whoever goes in or out, and at least one of them, often the porter's wife or half grown daughter, is always at hand.

The chief peculiarity of their temperament seems to be insatiable appetite. At whatever hour of day or evening you call on a concierge you are sure to find somebody eating or just risen from table, and the atmosphere inhabited by this bustling personage seems impossibly laden with the fumes of something recently boiled.

No matter whether you call on a friend who lives in some unpretentious out of the way place or on one who inhabits something like a palace, the concierge is always about the same. You can detect little differences between those in charge of important doors and of insignificant. They are as like as house flies. Of course there are private houses in Paris, with regular domestic servants such as you would find anywhere, but these, grand or simple, are so unusual that you remember the concierge as everywhere standing between you and further human intercourse.

In response to your card, which the concierge duly sees delivered, comes a card, often with a note, in return. If, as is generally the case, this acknowledgment of your existence contains an intimation of when your French acquaintance may be found at home, either habitual or for your special benefit, you make your second visit at this appointed time and thus enter into real personal relations.

Otherwise, your intercourse has limited itself to a polite exchange of cards. Generally speaking, you never expect or attempt to see French people socially except when they have asked you to one of their regular days of reception or have made a definite appointment. To call on a person at any other time—to do more than leave your card with the concierge—would be an intrusive pretense to intimacy.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

You can waste a good deal of time telling how reliable you are.

You never say a man won't listen to reason if he agrees with you.

A boy is liberally abused if he isn't polite, but how many say "Thank you" to a boy?

No one seems to have as hard a time earning money as the woman who marries for it.

The average man's idea of religious liberty is the privilege of staying home from church.

Having good judgment and being "a fool for luck" are frequently the story of a single financial success told by different parties.

"How poor are they who have no patience! What wound did ever heal but by degrees?" Who is the author of the above? It is not important whether you can remember the author if you can soberly accept the lesson taught.—Aitchison Globe.

The Value of Diamonds.

The value of the diamond is at so much per carat, and up to a certain limit the value per carat increases as the size of the stone increases. When a carat diamond is quoted at $125, a diamond weighing a half a carat is counted at the rate of $75 per carat, three-quarter carat diamonds at $100 per carat, one and one-quarter carat diamonds at $140 per carat, one and one-half carat diamonds at $150 per carat, one and three-quarter carat diamonds at $180 per carat, and two carat stones at $200 per carat. Stones weighing more than two carats sell at about the same rate as that quoted for two carat stones, and do not increase as rapidly owing to the more limited demand for the larger sized stones.—New York Herald.

To Calculate Longevity.

"Bacon took a deep interest in longevity and its earmarks," said a physician, "and Bacon's signs of long life and of short life are as true today as they ever were. You won't live long, Bacon pointed out, if you have soft, fine hair, a fine skin, quick growth, large head, early corpulence, short neck, small mouth, brittle and separated teeth and fat ears. Your life, barring accidents, will be very lengthy if you have slow growth, coarse hair, a rough skin, deep wrinkles in the forehead, firm flesh, a large mouth, wide nostrils, strong teeth set close together and a hard, gristly ear."

Dogs That Worry

If you have ever seen a dog that has lost its master in a London street you will wonder whether even the lower animals have not the elements of worry to disturb them. But the man worries about many other things than bones or masters, and the dog never suffers from insomnia through fear of a future life or the state of his banking account.—Reader.
