BABY GIRL FOUND ON THE DOORSTEP

Eugene, Or., Nov. 15.—Early Monday morning a 10-days' old girl baby was left on the doorstep at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Gum in Eugene. They heard a noise on the porch, and getting up they found the child wrapped in a blanket and shivering from the cold. The person who left it there purposely made a noise so that the child would be taken in immediately. On the child's clothing was the laundry mark of the Salem hospital but aside from that there is nothing else to indicate where it came from or to whom it belongs. Mr. Gum and wife are both over 60 years of age, and will probably not keep the baby, although they would like to. Already several women have offered to take it off their hands.

WOODMEN MAKE MERRY.

At the Redmen hall, on Friday night, November 15, the Modern Woodmen of America, now sprung to life in Marshfield after a long sleep, had a fine meeting, full of interest to all and of benefit to many. The North Bend team of Foresters, accompanied by a number of members of the order from that city, were strongly in evidence and had charge of the degree work. Seven new members came through the forest into camp on that occasion.

A splendid lunch was served by the Palace Restaurant force at the close of the military ceremony.

Predicts Waterway Connection.

Denver, Nov. 16.—John Barrett, director of the International Bureau of American Republics, speaking today at a banquet given in his honor by the Denver Chamber of Commerce, made the prediction that eventually Denver will be connected by canals with the Gulf of Mexico and the Mississippi River.

Silk Mills Close.

York, Pa., Nov. 16.—Three silk mills in this city, owned by the American Silk Company, closed at noon today, throwing between 800 to 1000 employes out of work.

HOPES TO IMPROVE CONCRETE BUILDING

University of Oregon Experimenting With Tests of Strength and Permeability.

University of Oregon, Eugene, November 16.—The department of engineering of the University of Oregon has begun a series of exhaustive tests on the strength and impermeability of concrete for building purposes and for the construction of dams and reservoirs. The ordinary water-proof concrete is mixed in the proportion of one part of cement to two parts of sand and four of stone. If, though electrolytic action, induced by the addition of a small percentage of clay, alum or other agents, the approximate proportion can be changed to the ratio of one to three to six, it can easily be seen that a large saving can be made in the cost of materials, since the cement is the expensive part of the wall. Certain experiments already made have tended to show that concrete so mixed has both greater strength and greater impermeability. To determine whether or not this is true, some 300 or 400 tests will be made, extending through the year, with varying definite amounts of electrolytic agents added. Each sample will be submitted to a water pressure test of from 40 to 100 pounds to the square inch, in addition to the regular compression tests. The department of chemistry is co-operating, and the most thorough work possible will be done. C. A. McClain and J. W. McArthur, of the department of engineering, will have charge of the tests.

Since the University has at present no money available for the carrying on of such work, the expenses will be borne by the men in charge.

was being extended quite freely to the Middle West, principally to St. Louis. This did not indicate that the situation in this locality was serious, he said, but simply showed a general easing up of the stringent conditions.

Clarinda, Iowa, Nov. 16.—William P. Hepburn, chairman of the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce, speaking of possible congressional legislation this winter said: "I regard it as extremely probable there will be enacted legislation to secure regulation of the issues of stocks and bonds of corporations doing interstate business. I also regard it as most desirable that the taxing power of the Government should be used to prevent gambling in railroad stocks."
