BAH!

In the circles of society where the children of inherited wealth, position and reputation, flash and fizzle, luxury immorality and degeneracy seem always ready to co-operate with a immorality of misfortune to disgrace the age and discredit human institutions. It is so periodically with the aristocracy of England. High society in France has long been a milder of the buried cities of ancient wealth. The court of Vienna has never been fit for much else than to lead the Devils Dance. That Russia, if it is natural in its divisions, is probably so because it takes fewer pretensions to avoid the reactions of brute coarseness. Even New York City, descendant of Britain and Hollander, goes insane through artificiality and passion, and reads the world chapters of salacious and disgusting degeneracy. Just now the world is having pictures of German court life flashed forth on the screens of publicity, and it appears at the children of the great and famous are just as disreputable behind the scenes in that land of God as the other countries from which they are expected. But it is a healthy reaction when the so unfortunate a personage as the untitled Maximilian, archduke, editor of Die Zukunft, can lack the members of the Emperor's mediate circle and be acquitted of a criminal charge of defamation of character. In his paper he exposed several Count Kuno Von Moltke, a of the great field marshal, for generate and discreditable actions a member of the infamous "Court marilla." The attack astonished the Emperor and in part because of the courage required to try the assault so near to the person of the Emperor himself. Harden is acquitted of the charge of defamation but is now placed on trial for sedition and says he will prove all he asserted. It is not pretended that the Emperor is involved, but the world could wish, for the credit of the German throne, that the emperor and his immediate family did not acquire such a law as that involved "lese majeste," to protect him. The Emperor could live with his court, out in the open as other men and women do, they could be above suspicion, whereas the danger of sipping their way or speaking of their actions, makes good people doubtful, especially when such objects as the son of Von Moltke, are held from behind the royal family's breastworks, to be viewed and hoored. People wonder why his intimates didn't know more about it.

MONEY TO BURN.

Merchant, Banker and Manufacturer: "Can't we come in and sit by the fire?" —Sullivant in New York American.

GOOD EVENING

Show me the man that never makes a mistake and we will show you the man that never makes anything. The capacity for an occasional blunder is inseparable from the capacity to bring things to pass. The only men who are past the danger of making mistakes are the men who are asleep at Greenwood.—W. L. Wayland.

YOURSELF.

"We shall know each other better when the mists are cleared away"—
 Does the knowledge of that please you, does it make you happy, say? Have you lived with your neighbor, with your friends that you will be glad to have your soul's unvelving come about, that they may see what you've thought of them, and said to them, and done for them? Are you ready now for the mist's clearing that shall put your soul on view? If your very nearest, dearest friend could read your soul, and come to con over all its pages, could you meet him without shame? "We shall know each other better when the mists are cleared away"—
 When the shadows from the valleys climb the heights, and when you pray
 To the God of Things who made you—"Oh, receive my soul at last."
 And the earth rocks with His coming, will that soul be overcast
 With the dread of things you know of? Will the careless little things Of your past life flock about you with a fluttering of wings
 Till they block your path to glory, close the gateway just ahead?
 Is there nothing that will haunt you, nothing done or dreamed or said?

"We shall know each other better when the mists are cleared away"—
 If you see your best friend waiting by the gate to endless day
 And your soul is like a parchment that his eyes may see and read,
 Will you meet him frankly smiling, prove you were his friend in deed,
 And his friend in word, and always; on life's heights and in life's rut?
 Did you never tell another, "Yes, he's a nice fellow, but"—
 When another in your hearing vented with venomous tongue and hot
 This same friend, then absent, did you rise in his defense or not?
 "We shall know each other better when the mists are cleared away"—
 That's good knowledge to take with you, and remember every day,
 That some day the world shall see you as you see yourself and know all the things that actuate you ordering you to and fro
 Through the world and by that knowing they shall praise you or shall blame?
 With this knowledge will you gladly meet your fellows over there
 —to put it in a nutshell—are you treating yourself square?
 —J. M. Lewis.

The nicest thing a Coos Bay girl found in her stocking Christmas morning was—oh, everyone knows the nicest thing in a Coos Bay girl's stocking Christmas or any other morning in the year—so what's the use of telling that.

A Kansas postmaster has adopted and put up the following as a part of the rules of his office which are quite appropriate. Deputy Postmaster Sumner is thinking of adopting them for Marshfield.
 "No letters will be delivered until received.
 "If you don't get a letter or a paper on the day you expect it, have the postmaster look through all the boxes and the cellar also; it ought to be there somewhere and he likes to look for it just to please you.
 "If your friend don't write curse the postmaster, he is to blame.
 "If he says 'no mail,' put a grievous expression on your face and say, 'well, there ought to be some.' He is probably hiding your mail for the pleasure of having you call for it three or four times a day. Ask him to look again."

"EDITORS"

A little boy in a neighboring town was given the stunt by his father to write an essay on "Editors," and here is the result:

"I don't know how newspapers come to be in the world. I don't think God does, for he hasn't got nothing to say about them and editors in the Bible. I think the editor is one of the missing links you read of, and stayed in the bushes until after the flood; and then come out and wrote the thing up, and has been here ever since. I don't think he ever died. I never saw a dead one and never heard of one getting licked. Our paper is a mighty good one, but the editor goes without underclothes all winter and don't wear any socks and paw ain't paid his subscription since the paper started. I ast paw if that was why he had to suck the juice out of snowballs in winter and go to bed when he had a shirt washed in summer. And then paw took me out into the woodshed and he licked me awful hard. If the editor makes a mistake folks say he ought to be hung; but if the doctor makes any mistakes he buries them and people dassent say nothing because doctors can read and write Latin. When the editor makes a mistake there is lawsuits, swearing and a big fuss, but if the doctor makes one there is a funeral, cut flowers and perfect silence. A doctor can use a word a yard long without him or anybody knowing what it means; but if the editor uses one he has to spell it. If the doctor goes to see another man's wife he charges for the visit; but if the editor goes he gets a charge of buckshot. When the doctor gets drunk its a case of being overcame by the heat and if he dies its from heart trouble; when an editor gets drunk its a case of too much booze and if he dies its the jim-jams. Any old college can make a doctor; an editor has to be born."—Ex.
