LOSER A MARSHFIELD MAN

John McGillvery Thought to be Owner of a Fat Wallet Picked Up on Portland Streets.

Is your name John McGillvery? Do you know a man by the name of John McGillvery? In either case rejoice. The sum of $2046, all in one roll was found on the streets of Portland one day last week and they can't find an owner for it. They think he may be living in or about Marshfield. They have investigated all the McGillverys up there and none answer the description, so its up to Marshfield to find the owner of this juicy roll. There are many men in Marshfield who would like a $2,000 roll just about this season of the year and probably some who would change their name to McGillvery or even to McGinty for a roll half that big. But that will not do. They want the real and only genuine, name blown in his underclothes, McGillvery, and he has $2,000 waiting him in Portland. Here is what the Saturday issue of the Portland Telegram says about the matter:

"For three hours today $2046 cash was being hawked around the streets of Portland in search of an owner. Four men who bore the name of McGillvery turned down the offer extended to them to make it theirs. The unfortunate custodian was at his wits' end over the matter, and faced the dire catastrophe of being forced to have the cash left on his hands. He tramped the streets and used the telephone in his efforts to get rid of the "roll," and as night comes on he finds himself still in possession of it, although with hopes of being rid of it tomorrow or the day after.

"Incidental to all of these things is the fact that if Diogenes or who ever it was that went through the streets of Athens in search of one honest man were on earth now his quest would have ended. K. K. Kubli, of the Kubli Printing company, is the man.

"As he was leaving the printing company's plant at 10 o'clock this morning and walked down Stark street in the direction of the Ladd & Tilton Bank, suddenly his eyes spied a leathern wallet lying on the sidewalk. He picked it up, and in opening it to find the address, his startled eyes met the sight of $2046 and some cents, in paper, gold and silver. It had evidently been dropped by a man but a short distance ahead, for the street was well filled with people, but Kubli had not seen it dropped and so he searched for the name. This was found in one of the compartments. It was John McGillvery.

"Then followed a search for the owner of the bills that occupied several hours of Mr. Kubli's time. After a canvass of all the McGillverys in town to no avail, by some means Mr. Kubli became possessed of the fact that the wallet might be the property of a man by that name who lives either in Marshfield or Marshland, Or. Mr. Kubli is now hoping that the owner will turn up and prove the right to his property. To that end he has advertised the find and will turn the wallet over to the owner upon presentation of proper proof of ownership and identification. The wallet is at the Kubli Printing company's store, 228 Stark street."

FARMERS FOLLOW FLOCKS

An Old Timer Says What One Does Another Follows and Just Now Chickens Seem to be Popular.

Mary's Little Hen.
Mary had a little hen
Upon her little farm,
Against the wolf before the door
It proved to be a charm.

Each day it laid a little egg,
Which Mary sold at town,
And thus she bought her groceries
And now and then a gown.

The years passed on, and Mary paid
The little mortgage due,
And sent her girl to boarding school,
Her boy to college, too.

She has a nest egg in the bank,
And even keeps a cook,
And everything about her has
A thrifty, well kept look.

Says she to those who daily fall
With needle, brush and pen:
"If you would do as well as I,
Just keep a little hen."
—Up-to-Date Farming.

The Allegany correspondent of the Times writes that an "old timer" expressed as a result of years of observation that what one person does to make a living on Coos river, all will do. This axiom seems to be verified in the present rush to get into the chicken business. Several people seem to have simultaneously thought that the open sesame to wealth was to be found in the humble hen. It seems as if her very cackle sounds like the jingle of coin. A few chickens are as good as a bank account and a large ranch looks like a gold mine. Among those who have been preparing to operate the chicken business on a larger scale are the following:

Ora McClay has a Brown Leghorn ranch of about 300 chickens. Mr. Patten and J. A. Stemmerman have two large flocks of Brown Leghorns. S. J. Defreeze and Geo. Gould have Barred Rocks and Brown Leghorns. Mr. Pigeon and J. H. Price are starting their ranch with Rhode Island Reds. C. A. Rodine is putting his faith and money into the Brown Leghorns. In addition to these every farmyard on the river has fowls of some description and many are preparing to add to their present supply.

PORT ORFORD POINTERS.

The Week's News Culled From the Columns of The Tribune.

There is an epidemic of colds prevailing here in consequence of our long spell of bad weather. The disease is catching, and is called "Dumps."

Doctors Tyler, Mann and Granville have all been in consultation over the case of Fred D. Stewart, who contracted pneumonia, complicated with other features, from recent exposures, and now lies dangerously ill, at our home in Port Orford, but with favorable symptoms as we go to press.

Some idea of the severity of Thursday's gale may be gleaned from the fact that nineteen trees fell across a mile and a half of road south of Hubbard's creek. Two gangs of men were two days clearing the roads in this district.

Wm. Reitz, once commissioner of this county, and an old veteran of the Civil War, died at the Soldier's Home at Santa Monica, Cal., Nov. 2nd, 1907.

Jno. R. Miller and wife and Miss Sylvia Clarno left here Sunday and will spend the winter at Portland and Oregon City. Al Marsh drove them up to Bandon with his four horse team and will bring back Mrs. Marsh and a load of freight.

Road Supervisor Ellis has had several teams at work hauling gravel on the road near Sixes river. Work was also being done by our northern neighbors on the worst places in the famous "green timber."

The friends of the new road from Sixes to Denmark say that it can be built for $4500 or less, and they will meet the challenge that it can't be built for less than $8000 by good bids for the former amount or less.

Quite a number of burnt piling have come ashore off Port Orford, also some lumber supposed to have drifted up from Humboldt Bay, from the Sotoway, which caught fire at sea and drifted ashore at that place.

Will Colebrook and Will White bought a small band of mutton sheep from E. W. Jensen, which they drove down to their ranches Monday. They are in good order and will probably be butchered to supply Gold Beach.

Word has been received in the city that Captain Nelson, of the Coos Bay bar lighthouse, has been transferred to the Golden Gate lighthouse, and that he will leave to take charge of his new place on the next trip of the steamship Plant. A Mr. Boyd, of No. 1 Bandon, is said to be his successor at this point, the change to be effected within a few days.
