SEEK TO BUILD DREDGE HERE

Delegation to Rose City Will Interview Portland Iron Works on Project.

While they are in Portland, the delegation from Coos Bay composed of Colonel Brigham, Peter Loggie and Walter Lyon will interview the Portland Iron Works which has secured the contract to build the government dredge. They will endeavor to persuade the company to submit a contract for the building of the wooden portion of the dredge, and if successful, the firm of Kruse & Banks will make a bid for the structure.

This move is expected to cause the dredge to be put in shape on Coos Bay, as the freight of the timber will enable the local shipbuilding firm to outbid any other firm, the wood being furnished by the big mills on the bay. The question of shipping the machinery to this point is a consideration to be overcome, but the prospects are that the visitors to Portland will be successful in this quest. Should they succeed in this movement this will give Coos Bay a chance to be early on the ground for the use of the dredge in the local harbor improvements.
