MRS. R. SUMERLIN, of North Bend, is recovering after an attack of sore throat.

MRS. W. R. SIMPSON, of North Bend, is convalescing after a severe attack of pleurisy.

J. J. CLINKENBEARD, of Daniels Creek, was visiting with relatives in North Bend Thursday.

MR. and MRS. W. PIPER, of Coos River, are spending the week with relatives in North Bend.

JAMES L. DURRAND, of North Bend, was in Marshfield Wednesday visiting with his many friends.

MRS. G. SIMPSON, who was called to Coquille by the serious illness of her mother, has returned home.

Game a Tie.—The basket ball game Wednesday night between the two teams from the North Bend school ended in a tie. There was a good attendance at the game.

Needle Workers Meet.—The Artistic Needle Workers met Thursday at the home of Mrs. F. E. Allen. The afternoon was passed in the usual industrious manner. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Takes Salvage Cargo.—The barkentine Arago, which has been taking lumber at the Porter dock, has gone to old North Bend, where she will take the cargo off the Coquille, and then depart for San Francisco. The Coquille will be remembered as the boat taken in tow by the Columbia, off Coos Bay bar some weeks ago, in a leaking condition, the result of striking bottom while crossing the Siuslaw river bar, and which the Simpson Lumber company held for salvage.

House Warming.—In honor of the completion of the handsome residence on Daniels Creek of her father, J. J. Clinkenbeard, Miss Anna Clinkenbeard last Saturday gave a house warming to about sixty of her friends. Many were in attendance from Coos Bay and the vicinity around Daniels Creek. A most delightful time was had by the guests. During the evening vocal and instrumental music was rendered and games played. The guests were also treated to a sumptuous supper.

Another Abyss Victim.—For the second time in two days a wagon dropped into the yawning abyss of mud directly in front of the Parsons Lockhart drug store Thursday afternoon. This time it was a delivery wagon from Going & Harvey's furniture store. There were some few hundred pounds of stoves, tables and other household goods aboard, and this helped materially to anchor the vehicle securely. All efforts to "cast loose" proved unavailing until Hank Wells and Marshal Carter, assisted by some of the athletes of Marshfield, attached a rope and pulled the wagon back to sunshine and solid ground.

Job Lot of Laughs.—Demaris Gabbert, prima donna of the Crystal Theater, is clinching her hold on Coos Bay people still further this week with "Don't Leave the Old Folks, Jennie." Miss Gabbert has a magnetic voice and personality, and seems to live in the spirit of her songs. Those wishing to develop the side muscles are especially invited to attend the week end show at the Crystal this week. Messrs. McCullough and McCullough have a jolt lot of laughs—all sizes and the latest spring and summer styles—which they are giving away at a sacrifice with every moving picture. "In Search of Adventure," "His First Success," and "Life's Reality," are each and every one guaranteed to put vim and vigor in the "funny bone."

To Stop Boat Hunters.—"A Sportsman," who writes to the Times regarding the sportsmen of this vicinity neglecting a duty in not making some effort to stop chasing ducks with gasoline boats, is evidently a new comer, otherwise he would have known that the sportsmen of the bay, and county generally, did all in their power to have the practice prohibited by an act introduced in the last Legislature. The petition was signed by hundreds of the Coos county sportsmen, and a law was framed and introduced in the House, which afterwards was referred to a committee and was neglected, or laid on the table, or put to sleep, or was lost in the shuffle—anyhow it didn't become a law, for which the sportsmen are not responsible. The matter will be brought up again at the next session, when it is hoped better luck will attend the efforts of those who appreciate the disastrous results attending the practice of chasing ducks with gasoline boats.—News.

PORT ORFORD POINTERS.

Important Items of the Week Taken From the Tribune.

Eugene White has taken the place of Eugene Strain as stage driver from Port Orford to Hare, and the latter will return to his home and resume the work on his dairy.
 Married.—In San Francisco, January 30th, 1908, by Rev. Bell, Hugh C. Hampton, of Louisville, Ky., and Harriet Haines, of Eckley, Oregon. The bride is a daughter of Joseph Haines and wife, of Eckley, who are among the oldest of our settlers.

The beach north and south of here is literally covered with a film of oil, which came in from the ocean a few days ago, coming, no doubt, either from a leak of some oil burner or from some storm-tossed vessel that used it to calm the seas. Maybe a gusher opened in the ocean bed not far away.

"Port Orford Jakie," the last of the Sixes Indians, died last Sunday at his home on Euchre creek, where for some time he has been in poor health and a county charge, although he had a valuable allotment claim in that section. He was about 70 years of age, and was liked by all who knew him.

H. A. St. Earle and W. M. Dillenback, the government officials who went up to Big Bend via Lobster creek and Iron Mountain, returned Saturday and left by Monday's stage. The say that the snow on the Iron Mountain divide was five feet deep. Will Coy, of Corbin, was their guide, and though they had some experience, they stood it well.

John R. Miller's boat is running fine and is said to be the fastest one on the Coquille river, and John R. fairly beams with smiles in consequence.
