DRESS REFORM FOR MAIDENS

Fashionable New York School
Places Ban on Ultra-Fashionable Clothing.

The Forbidden Garments.
Merry Widow hats, or hats of extremely large proportions, or trimmed in a conspicuous manner.
Hair ribbons of too large size or conspicuous in color.

False hair of any description.
"Lotta Faust" collars, "Dutch necks" and "maline bows."
Peek-a-boo waists or waists with short sleeves.

All bracelets and jewelry except pins necessary for the clasping of collars.
Gowns of conspicuous colors, materials of extravagant price.

Light shoes, fancy cloth-topped shoes or shoes with high heels or fancy buttons.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The girls of Horace Mann School have been forbidden to wear ultrafashionable or extravagant headgear, false hair, elaborate adornments of jewelry, highheel shoes and peek-a-boo waists.

This sweeping edict was given from the pulpit in the chapel. Ever since, the new dress reform has been the chief topic of discussion among the girls, who aver that the boys in the school are allowed wide latitude in their selection of wearing apparel.

For months the question of proper dress has agitated the pupils and interested the teachers. A certain clique of girls have been in the habit of going to their class in raiment that verged upon the extremely fashionable types. Finally, a girl showed herself in a hat that bewildered her colleagues. It was a Gainsborough affair with untold decorations. She was told by one of the teachers that she must not wear such a hat to school. Another girl revealed a coiffeur gay with little artificial puffs and was promptly commanded to leave the surplus attachments at home.

These instances aroused a keen rivalry among the girls in the matter of dress, until the decision was reached to tell the girls that there must be moderation in dress.

THE NEW AGE.

WHEN navies are forgotten
And fleets are useless things,
When the dove shall warm her bosom
Beneath the eagle's wings,

WHEN memory of battles
At last is strange and old,
When nations have one banner
And creeds have found one fold,

WHEN the hand that sprinkles midnight
With its powdered drift of suns
Has hushed this tiny tumult
Of sects and swords and guns,

WHEN hate's last note of discord
In all God's worlds shall cease,
In the conquest which is service,
In the victory which is peace!

NATURAL LIFE IS 120 YEARS

Recipe—Eat What You Want
When You Want It, Chew it and Be Happy.

"One hundred and twenty years is the natural term of life."

"Health, perfect health, is a mental and dental question."

"The dentist stands at the gateway of preventive medicine."

"All discussions of health and efficiency hark back to chewing. There is no other place for them to lead to."

"Don't count the chews or do anything to make eating a bore. Anything that detracts from the natural enjoyment is injurious."

"Don't eat by schedule or when worried, especially when angry."

"Fletcherism is opposed to excess in any form, even in chewing."

"Eat when you feel like it and eat what you want."

"Fasting is nature's universal remedy. I knew a man who had been thrown on the scrap heap and could hardly be pulled away. He fasted for thirty-seven days and got rid of Bright's disease and other maladies and even lost a wart."

"Eating may be a religious function or the sacrilegious abuse of sacred responsibilities."

NEW YORK, June 4.—These are some of the pointing fingers on the road to Wellville which Horace Fletcher at the Berkeley Theatre held up to the League for Political Education in his discussion of "Health and Efficiency."

Only Referee is the Body.

Mr. Fletcher had been preceded by Dr. William Gilbert Anderson, director of Yale University gymnasium, who made the experiments on Fletcher and his son-in-law, Dr. Van Sameron, when it was discovered that the man who at forty-five had been given up by the doctors at fifty-five could beat the best athletes.

"Fletcher will tell you to chew your food and Wiley will counsel you to swallow it whole, as a dog does," said Dr. Anderson, "but the only referee is the body."

"I used to go to sleep," said Fletcher, "so hopeless that I wished I might never wake up. I was deterred from suicide only through the fear that I might miss something pleasant on this side of the Styx. The story of my recuperation is the story of many famous men and women. One you already know—Mrs. Humphry Ward. A celebrated physician and a prominent politician are also in the list."

The founder of Fletcherism recommended that a child should be trained in the way it should chew from the first moment that it demonstrated a desire for food.

Eating Should Not be Tedious.
"Some nervous people," he said, "suffer by their great effort to do

CHAMPION EGG EATERS

MONROE CITY, Mo., June 4.—

Whether it is something to be proud of or not, Monroe City has, in George W. Kidd, a resident who is a tremendous eater. He is good for ten eggs at any meal, but holds the palm at eating fruit and candy. One evening shortly after a hearty supper George found that his appetite was not quite appeased so he ate thirty-six bananas, sixty oranges and a pound of candy, so that he would not retire hungry.

"I really don't know how much I could eat," said George, "because eating is expensive."

He is five feet ten inches tall and weighs 220 pounds.

The feat of John Giffen of Winsted, Conn., who ate eighteen eggs at one sitting, has been outdone by Frank Ryan of Whiteside, Mo., who ate thirty-five at one sitting, and he had no thought of making a record. The next day Frank ate nineteen for supper. He likes them scrambled.

Rocky McPike of New London, Mo., is willing to meet any man who thinks he can eat eggs.

Eats Seven Dozen.

TRENTON, Tenn., June 4.—It is believed that a local negro is entitled to the egg consuming championship. For a wager of $15, he recently devoured seven dozen raw eggs and topped off his luncheon by eating the contents of eighteen boxes of sardines. The negro declares his willingness to meet any egg eater in the country in a contest for the national gastronomic championship.

Tries For Honors.

MANISTIQUE, Mich., June 4.—Joe Sheets of Shaler county, will attempt to win the title as champion egg eater of Michigan soon, when he will give a public exhibition as a consumer of hen fruit at a local hotel. He has guaranteed to devour not less than eight dozen eggs, and is hopeful of getting away with ten dozen at a single sitting.

the right thing even in chewing. This is in direct opposition to Fletcherism. Eating should have no element of tediousness. When do I eat? I eat anywhere between 11 a. m., and 6 p. m. Ordinarily I take a bottle of milk, a small pitcher of cream, some bread and butter and a potato. I have been gradually led away from heat diet until I have acquired a repulsion for it."

Fletcher said he was obliged to chew less now than at first because the digestive secretions had grown more active. He likewise insisted that the perfectly normal body required less sleep and that five hours were ample for him under present conditions. He never sleeps more except when he is in Venice, at his home and "indulging lazy habits."

The speaker placed no limit on the necessary fast. He thought the body itself the best suggester in this regard. He spoke of his advanced youth and instanced a man of 100 who from 10 a. m. until 9 p. m. had dictated a story of 10,000 words of his scheme of living which neither fatigued him nor required revision.

ANTI-TREAT CLUB LATEST

Business Men of Kelso, Ore.,
Save Money by Novel
Organization.

KELSO, Wash., June 4.—An anti-treating club, composed of some of the best-known men of the community and embracing many of the moderate drinkers of Kelso and Catlin, who in the past have been among the best patrons of the saloons, has been formed here.

Some years ago the saloons of this city were on the principal business street, and owing to complaints from women, the city council forced the saloons off the main business street and restricted them to the street fronting on the Northern Pacific Railroad. This was shortly followed by an enforcement of the Sunday closing law, and at this time Kelso believed that a great deal had been done to improve conditions. But when the anti-treating club was formed by the men about town, it was found that the former changes were but a small matter compared to the last in the suppression of drinking.

Members of the new club, many of whom spent from $1 to $1.50 per day in the saloons before joining the new organization, claim they not only save themselves large expenditures, but as a result of joining the club have cut down their daily consumption of liquors. They say that under no conditions could they again be induced to return to the old order, while the saloonmen complain bitterly that this organization of their patrons has done them more harm than did the enforcement of the Sunday closing law and the removal of their places from the principal business street.

The old town of Catlin, across the Cowlitz river from Kelso and connected with the latter by a draw bridge, is now a part of Kelso, the two having been incorporated under the latter name. In the new part of the city (in the old town of Catlin) there are no saloons. The original owner of the townsite, when he laid out the town of Catlin, incorporated a clause in the deeds for all time prohibiting the sale of intoxicants on land covered by the deeds issued by him, and while efforts have been made a number of times to establish saloons there, none has ever been opened, a fact that is making that section a popular residence district.
