OPEN THE DOOR OF YOUR HEART.

OPEN the door of your heart, my lad. To the angels of joy and truth When the world is full of unnumbered joys. In the beautiful dawn of youth. Casting aside all things that mar, Saying to wrong, "Depart!" To the voices of hope that are calling you Open the door of your heart.

OPEN THE WINDOW of your home and let the fresh breezes of summer in.

OPEN the window of your home and let the fresh breezes of summer in. Let God's blessed sunshine into the house; never mind if it fades the carpet; a few days of life and health are worth more to you and your family than all the carpets made since the world began.

WITH THE TOAST AND TEA

GOOD EVENING.

Get your happiness out of your work or you will never know what real happiness is. ELBERT HUBBARD.

Our baby isn't lullaby'd, nor rocked until he sleeps.

The pacifier's not allowed to soothe him when he weeps. His mammy and his daddy both are sterilized each day.

He may not chew his little thumb, while on the rug he squirms, For thumbs they are not healthful and rugs they teem with germs.

He mustn't kiss his Auntie Maud, nor yet his Uncle John, For osculation is a thing that microbes dote upon.

The man who orders his steak rare is satisfied if it is well done.

Love's flame hasn't much chance against fireproof paint.

If people would work more and hope less, it might help some.

The world is a stage on which every man wants to be a star.

The exchange editor's jokes are quite apt to be sheer nonsense.

Life is too short to waste time throwing stones at curs.

An old maid always hates to hear of a widow marrying again.

"Can't you give that young man a hint?" inquired a Coos Bay mother at 11:45 p. m.

Sometimes an angel can make angel cake that will put the kibosh on a trusting husband's digestion.

Everybody turns his back upon the porous plaster, but it remains stuck up despite the slight.

The Sage of the Millicoma says, "There are two things that money cannot buy. Happiness is one and 'It's a boy' is the other."

No woman ever put on another woman's rubbers without sniffing at them for being so large.

There is absolutely no use quarreling with a woman when you expect to yield to her anyhow.

A man dropped into the city market this morning.

"Give me a nice porterhouse," he ordered.

"Extremely sorry, sir," said Hobson, urbanely, "but we are not giving anything away this morning."

"I am very sorry to hear, Captain Salter, that your wife left you so unceremoniously."

"My mistake, sir. I took her for a mate and she proved to be a skipper."

"Before we were married," said Mrs. Chatterton, "you used to tell me how much you loved me, but you never do now."

"Of course not, my dear," replied the masculine end of the matrimonial combine. "Since our marriage you haven't given me a chance to tell you anything."

It was a Bangor philosopher who summed up a church fair in these terms:

"A church fair is a place where we spend more money than we can afford for things we do not want in order to please people, whom we do not like and to help the heathens, who are happier than we are."

"The boys in this town must have heard all about me before we moved here," boasted Tommy on the day after the family's arrival on Coos Bay.

"But there's no one here that knew us," objected his mother.

"That's all right," persisted Tommy. "Just as soon as I came in the schoolyard this morning they all yelled 'Hello Bricktop!' just the way they used to do back in Minnesota."
