The One Hundred and Thirty Second Fourth

BANG! FOURTH OF JULY is with us again. It has been with us one hundred and thirty-two times and it has always been a glorious one. When the day closes and the noise of battle is over, the list of dead, dying and injured is made up, the nation realizes that it has had a high old time and in a very large number of cases a close call. The most enjoyable feature of the day is generally a hair breadth escape or two. Last year, the list of casualties on the glorious Fourth, was not much less than five thousand. The year before it was about the same. In the years that have passed since the revolution, more men, women and children have been injured in celebrating the Fourth than all the American armies lost in the revolution. It is a day of terror and license, a day of noise and folly, a day of disaster and sorrow. It should be a day of consecration and rejoicing.

The American people have good reason to be joyful on this anniversary. The whole world has as much. When the first Fourth dawned, in 1776, the only republic on earth, worthy the name was Switzerland. The only constitutional monarchy worthy the name was England, altho Holland with a species of hereditary and aristocratic government pretended to be somewhat of a republic. The example of the United States was inspiring, contagious and effective. All Europe began to follow suit. France got excited and turned herself inside out in her effort to get rid of monarchy and aristocracy and imitate the trans-Atlantic republic. The struggle has been going on in every government on earth to approach the democratic ideal which this republic has illuminated. Success is not always apparent in such efforts, but the whole world is many times better by reason of the American Fourth and all it stands for than if it had never dawned. Greatest day in the calendar, next to Christmas, it should in truth be a sort of a mid-summer Christmas, sacred to the highest ideals in government as Christmas is sacred to the highest ideals in life. May the people, the boys and girls, the men and women, come to realize soon that the best celebration and the greatest pleasure are not in producing absurd explosions, but in some forms of rejoicing which will be less barbarous than noise, less brutal than dissipation and less heartrending than the catastrophes which maim and mangle so many little children.

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS.

Four score and seven years ago, our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now, we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation—or any nation so conceived and so established—can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We are met to dedicate a portion of it as the final resting-place of those who have given their lives that the nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense, we can not dedicate, we can not consecrate, we can not hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it far above our power to add to or to detract. The world will very little note nor long remember what we say here; but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work that they have thus far so nobly carried on. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us; that from those honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they here gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that the nation shall, under God, have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

WITH THE TOAST AND TEA

GOOD EVENING.

The two things that men's lives want most as they grow older are, I think, simplicity and independence.

PHILLIPS BROOKS.

When the earth's last picture is dusted and the floors are painted and dried,

When the oldest carpet is beaten, and the youngest spider has died—We shall rest—and faith we shall need it—He down for a moment or two

Till the dust on the grand piano shall set us to work anew.

We shall have real paint to lean on—pile everything into the hall. And scrub for an hour at a sitting, and never be tired at all. And they that are clean shall be happy; they shall eat off a kitchen chair.

And dab with an ample dustcloth at the back of the Chiffonier.

And the man of the house shall praise us—or (more than probably) blame,

And no one shall work for money—and certainly not for fame, But each for the joy of cleaning, and each in her feminine glee. That the house may be perfectly spotless, as the neighbors think it should be.

A Coos Bay woman arrives at a conclusion the same way she throws a rolling pin at a cat—er that is some women.

It's a good thing that some Coos Bay men do not have to eat their own words. There is no use choking a man to death.

The trouble with some Coos Bay women is that they always want everything that you do not want them to have. And "they want what they want when they want it," too.

'Tis here again,
The hat of straw;
Let none complain
Of nature's law.
Which everything
In season due
Doth gaily bring
With glories new!

No blossoms rare
On tree or vine
Would dare compare
Its charms with thine
Our weather guide
Without a flaw!
Our hope! our pride!
Our hat of straw!
—Geo Goodrum.

Teacher—What is the total population of the globe?
Small boy (promptly)—One and one-half billions.
Little girl (raising her hand)—Please, ma'am, we have a new baby brother in our house.

The Foolish Fish.
Ho, all ye merry little fish,
Ye suckers and ye sun,
Ye cats and chubs and other kinds
That promise so much fun;
Ye careless, happy fish that swim
In all the laughing streams,
Whose rippling waters tickle you
In sunny, springtime dreams,
Beware the bait upon the hook,
That dangles all about;
For Dr. Dix will get you
If
You Don't Watch Out!
