W. A. THIES RETURNS FROM CALIFORNIA

Brings Encouraging News of Prospects For Coos Bay Coal Briquette Company.

W. A. Thies, the mechanical engineer who is interested in the German-American Coal-Briquet Company, whose plans contemplate a plant on Coos Bay, returned on the M. F. Plant from Los Angeles, Cal., where he went in a professional capacity to advise as to the installation of irrigation machinery. Mr. Thies investigated fuel conditions in California while away and has a better idea than ever of the exceptional resources and opportunities of this part of Oregon. He found that the Tesla and Stockton briquet plants were making big money on a very poor quality of coal and a briquet which required a binder. He declares that Coos Bay has a sure future in the manufacture of briquets and that the men who doubt the ability of science to make the slack of the lignite coal into briquets are very greatly mistaken and way behind the times. The Tesla briquets, he says, are not to be spoken of in the same breath with those of France and Germany, and are not comparable with those which were made in Minneapolis by him. The reporter reminded him of the claim he had heard that the United States navy would rent all their war vessels for the use of oil. Mr. Thies laughed. "Oil will do very well for light commercial vessels. In war it is different. You don't want your war vessels equipped with a tank which will burst and explode your vessel the moment a shell touches it." Mr. Thies spent a part of his time, while studying his profession in Germany, in the German navy and is particularly well informed on the subject of naval equipment. "War vessels will never use oil, on any large scale," said he, "and the United States government is more anxious about this briquet proposition than about oil anywhere."
